4, 1891. HENRY PETERSON & CO., Publishers, No. 319 Walaut St., Philad's.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1867. Price 00.50 A Year, in Advance. Whole Me

MURIEL.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Like some vision strange she stands, Muriel, Muriel; Jewels flashing on her hands, Rarest gems from southern lands— Scorns she e'en my light commands, Muriel, Muriel.

Bend your pure eyes down to mine Muriel, Muriel. Kies me with those lips of thine, Lips as sweet as Rhenish wine; Lips and kisses all are mine, Muriel, Muriel!

Half my love was never told,
Muriel, Muriel.
Though you look so grand and cold,
In your geme and laces old,
Mine you are to have and hold, Muriel, Muriel.

O, but 'tis a picture sweet, Muriel, Muriel, Standing by the river fleet, Wavelets singing at her feet; Is it not some levely cheat, Mariel, Mariel ?

Bend your pure eyes down to mine, Mariel, Mariel, Kiss me with those lips of thine-Lips as sweet as Rhenish wine— Lips and hisses all are mine, Muriel, Muriel!

EMILIE MARIA CASS.

A SEA-SIDE IDYL.

BY AN IDLER.

" Is it very beautiful?"
"It is grand" And seen best by sunlight?"

"No, by moonlight. The wind is south-west, and blowing straight on the rocks." Paff, whizz! An eddying breez; whirled my Panama off my head, and carried it advoidly over the stone wall that shut in the lane. It went on ricochesting among the scrawny bushs of the meadows, till it caught in the blackberry thorns and stopped. When I returned from the pursuit, Goriana was When I returned from the pursuit, Gloriana was poising pensively on the grass ridge which the cart ruts had left in the road, her eyes demurely on the ground. Her pose made me nervous, because she seemed to be looking at my boots. Great dabs of mud lay on them, for the soil of the pasture was swampy. Some people always gather misery out of misfortune; the more fools than I refer to a day to get the more fools.

they. I prefer to get advantage from it.
"A stout wind, you see. It will pile up the Spouting Horn will be magnificent to-

Gloriana ceased to regard my boots; her eyes looked straight before her. As I hap-pened at that moment to be standing straight before her, our glances met. It was magnetism!

"You must see it. I shall be very careful." " Of your bat?"

"Pehaw. No; of you!"
"But will it be quite proper? You know we were only introduced this afternoon."

'Ask Hartley." Fadge!" I won't, we will go. I will rely implicitly on you."

The little fingers clutched closer to my arm How they thrilled me-so like tendrils! As iturned and looked down into Gloriana's eyes thought inetinctively of the oak and vine

What a sweet graceful vine it was!

It is astonishing, thought I, how rapidly a shrewd man can come to comprehend a woman. Caly this poon, at dinner time, I was oblivious of the very existence of this soft being who floats upon my arm. Walking out on the plazz, smoking my post-prancial cigar, a herly-ourly at the hotel door caught my attention. The stage had just wheeled off, leaving on the steps an old gentleman with a cotton umbrella, a young gentleman with silk hat, a Milesian female with a baby, and for the rainbow after the storm, an incomprehensible sylphlike form, who gave an order to the porter, and then vanished up the stairs. There was an avalanche of trunks, too; but of these I took no notice f trunks, too; but of there i soon f trunks, too; but of there i soon f tall. "Saratoga bandboxes" are my pet aver-

Just as my cigar had cindered down to zero, Hartley planted himself before my chair. "Now, George, it is a pity."

That we have got to go to-morrow."

"That we have got to go to morrow."

"Humph? She can do very well without us; besides (and, doubtless, my face wore a grim sort of smile as I spoke,) if you wish to stay, probably it can be managed somehow."

Harrier bit his lip. By a mysterious physical process, there also grew a faint red tinge, such as romancers might name a blush, upon his chest.

"Now, he ressonable, and merelful, too, if I tet ony it. The facts are, that there is a fresh ival, and I want you to be introduced."
"What is it?"

"H.len, Hebe, Cleopatra—an old friend of Confound that Hartley; he is forever bringing yacht effair. I was melancholy, if it must be up his old friends. He knows everybody.

"Where is it from?"

To make my emotions clear, an explanation

The moon. Come along." "The moon. Come along."

I flung away the remnant of my Havana and followed. There is no evading the rascal.

Into the ladies' parlor—into the remotest, and darkest, and coolest part of the parlor. There she sat, or, rather, there she rose.

"My friend, George Hoderst, Miss Gloriana; Miss Gloriana, George."

The fair debutante gave a cordial hand-graep.

I like that—and we two were economical in

In the last decourant gave a cordain hand-grasp.

—I like that—and we two were acquained in half-an-hour. If Hartley would only have kept out of the way. But, instead of this, he was malliciously, persistently in the way, making all kinds of queer inuendos, and distracting our piquant enchantress, until my patience became exhausted.

exhausted.

Some people are fertile in inventions. As to that matter, well, perhaps it is wiser to let actions be their own orators. Soft-praise is abominable in a geatleman. An idea flashed upon me, and I beckoned to the superfluous H.

"Go down to the beach, and hire $2xr's triumest yacht. We will be there shortly." [This last in a whisper, and so, properly, in small type—only Reade would be litigating about copyright.]

The man was quick at perception. He went. Then I caught my opportunity. "Miss—what shall I call you?"

Then I caught m

"Oh, Gloriana, by all means."
"Miss Glorians, would not you like to take a walk ?"

" Is it not too hot?"

"Believe me, no; it is quite cool."

"Believe me, no; it is quite cool."

"Very well—yea."

Bo we went also, only in an opposite direction.
hope Hartley enjoyed his yecht, the scamp!

The walk was enjoyable, at any rate.

Of course there are people who would be choked with envy at the case with which I had just persuaded this bewildering beauty to make the evening excursion. It was certainly a no-table triumph, but a great general never halts till the whole field is gained.

"Will your brother accompany us?"
"What brother?"

" Pardon me. I am overwhelmed with admiration. You dare to travel alone—an American Ida Pfeiffer, only a great deal younger, and—forgive me—not quite so ugly!"

"I wish my uncle were here; you would find him ugly enough," said Gioriana, withdrawing her hand as she spoke, and looking flushed and angry. A thousand apologies," I muttered, utterly taken aback by the result of my inquisitiveness.

"Not that any relative of mine is cross-eyed," she added half saide. "Nor cross-tempered either."
"You are plainly determined that I shall bear

my cross."
"Rather would I crucify and abase myself before you. It was an honest compliment, that enggestion about a possibility of your travelling alone. Die Vernon is my household goddess."

"Then you advocate woman suffrage?"

"So far as voting for moonlit trips, most un-nestionably; or riding on horseback, or bravey doing without us men, now and then, for the Does your uncle hold a different philo

Perhaps so, and perhaps not."

"So you would be angry with me for a 'per-"He would not understand you; though, of course, you meant well enough," continued my companion, relentingly. "I like courage in a woman, myself; but this time I am under ex-"Your unale? I should be most happy. He was on the coach." " Crear on the top-seat, with his head uniquely protected by-by a coston umbrella!" and Glo iana laughed merrily.

"Ab!" and very naturally I joined in the laughter, as the recollection of the apparition of the stage came more distinctly to my mind. "All the better, then (it is buman to fib).

will make one of our party.' Gioriana suited assenting s, and, as we started homeward to the hotel, it became quite evident that the blunder had been retrieved, and that everything would run smoothly thence

They were ringing the supper-bell when we resched the piszas of the Agawam, and I had the honor of leading in my companion. Hart-ley sat opposite and glared. Only a saint could have resisted the impulse for mild revenge. The present parrator was not a saint.

"Did you have a pleasant sail?" was my bland aterrogation. "Capital: we were a little too july-that is all. As you didn't come, I invited half-a-dezen loungers, just over from Southwest Harbor, and they were rather hard on the champagne. Sizer thinks the sail will have cost you a round hus-Gloriana locked up admiringly. How women dred-a mere trifle, though !

To make my emotions clear, an explanation is necessary. Hartley, though sometimes maindroit, the vagabond, was the man that I have always most liked, as the world goes. It had been a friendship of ten years' esanding, and was rather the better for age. Some ten months since, however, the scapagease not only fell in love, but married. I was down in New Orleans at the time, and, on returning to New York, told the fellow flaily that I'd never look at his wife or her photograph. Fortune favors the brave. She was away in New England, thanks to the beneficent stars, and Hartley was wandering up and down Broadway in bachelor loneliness. "Happy for a breathing spell," as I told him, only he was demanted enough not to realize it. Summer came flaming on. The intrusive "she" still lingered in the vicinity of "the Hub." Hartley's mother-in-law was sick, if the truth must out, and I was cruel enough to hope she must out, and I was cruel enough to hope she would continue so, provided it sidn't hart her. My old confrere found the dust and Simoom air My old confrere found the dust and Simoom air of Manhattan disagree with him. The dottor insisted on a vacation and the sea-side. So one day we voted to make a flying trip, by grace of rail and paddle-wheel, to Mt. Desert Island "Only," chimed in the exigent H., "when we return, you must promise to stay in Borton three days, and, well, be conquered by Trice!" What a jesious pang that mere atem of a name always produced in me! First I pooh-poohed and demurred; but there was no alternative. "Be it so, then—as to the stopping, I mean."

it so, then—as to the stopping, I mean."

Thus the bargain stood, and we went whiring towards sourise. Possibly the truth of history will require the statement that Hartley lodged one night in the modern Athens. But, then, Niebuhr has proven that much of history is mather and as to fruth what is it? as itselfor then, Niebuhr has proven that much of history is myth; and as to truth, what is it? as jesting Pilate and a thousand more have asked. In due time, at any rate, we had reached that roughest and most obarming of New Rogland wildernesses, the Island of Mt Desert. Up to this very hour of the appearance of Gioriana, we had lived, breathed, and had our being among the hills, along the trout-brooks, and out in the deep sea fishing-grounds. It was emphatically joily, and I had begun to feel fairly sentimental when news came that mamma-in-law was bester.

what is the use of wasting words. Hartley and I were bound to go "Hub" ward by the morrow's sun, and the prettiest romance in the world was likely to be nipped in the bud. Any one would be saturnize in such circumstances, and the vexation of it clouded my enjoyment, not only at the table, but after, when Hartley pro-posed we should stroll down to the beach and get eight of the fishing boats as they dropped in efore the twilight. Defore the twilight.

Glorians accompanied us, and, certes, if everything class seemed dismal, she was sunlight itself. What rifts of golden sunset lay in her magnificent hair! How sad and pensive were the glimpees of axure under those amber, dalicately arching eyebrows! How they would mellow and sentimentalize in the dusk of the moon-lit cliffs of Spouting Horn! As we saun-tered over the shingle on the beach Hartley was good-natured enough to leave us a good deal to ourselves, and, under the bewildering influences of the moment, it was easy for these buoyant anticipations to drive away the melancholy forebodings of the morrow.

"You are then fully resolved, Miss-Miss-" "Gloriana. You seem to be frighteped at my "I am howed down before it. It is so charming—like, like—"

"Myself. Really, Mr. Hodoret, I have to help you out. Of course I am resolved. Uncle and Mr. Hartley have both consected, and you cannot think I would resign the opportunity of making the acquaintance of so wonderful a visce of nature. Wen I have a excellent a clean lece of nature, when I have so excellent a cice one to point out its beauties. Besides, we is set Perhaps I shall go to morrow!"

To-morrow! That is good and bad. Why, it's what I have to do myself."

"Indeed. I hope your luck will be better then mine. You see my dear sig-there. I have already forgotten my proprieties. Well, reody-a very near relative in fact-is going to de on me, and carry me Graces know whither; possibly to horrid New

Now, this was curious. And then, the deliclous oneer at " the proprieties," to say nothing of "my dear sir." Her piquency and or state. Just then Hartley came up. nutes we had planned everything, and in half an hour we were sailing toward that hideosity which the islanders call Schooner Head.

which the telanders call Schooler Head.

"This Spouting Horn is a part of a gigantic ridge of porphyry which runs along two miles against the sea, rising three hundred feet above the sea-foam at its southerly abutment, and filling the spectator with genuine emotions of the southern." So I commenced my oration, Glori Glorians locked up admiringly. How women as smile on the men who call a bundred dollars a striffe. I began to be jealous of Hartley. And then the audacity of the fellow! For a moment I could not speak. It was like a man grinding his heal into your pet corn. "Ah," cotton umbrella, both together at the stern in chattering conversation with the skipper. They were remote, and Gloriana was near. Could the reader to understand that the question which troubled me had nothing to do with that ailly juncture?

"The spot which we are rapidly nearing has an unpostic name, but in itself is marvellous for grandeur. Imagine a castellated freak of nature, two massive bastions of solid rock, the inner face of the fortification like a grand fendal structure, the drawbridge up, and a dark gateway into which the waves, like the Moorish host in the old chivalrio days, are peuring in to storm the mighty stronghold of Christendom. The lawares, with their deep-blue glitter, recall the sicel armor of that glorious epoch. You hear the clash of a thousand spears, the ring of ten thousand battle-axes. For a moment one's faith pales before the terror of the onset, and the crescent seems to rise superior to the cress. But await! Behind the inner arch the inviding waters meet a second and an impassable wall. They fret and foam against it. The white crests of the waves dash thirly feet high toward the saummit; but it avails ranght. Then ensue discomfiture, and the dire confusion of the failure. The waters roll back in dismay, a mad harly-burly of broken strength, a choos of heaving turbulence—while the everlasting cliff lifts itself serene and unharmed above the impotent turmoil."

Here I paused to catch breath, and, if it must Here I paused to catch breath, and, if it must be confessed, to witness the effect of this rheteric upon my companion. Women, as all my readers know, love this sort of fustian. That is why Ruskin's books sell so well. Of coarse, to a matter-of-fact person like myself, such flummery is tiresome; but I had picked up Hartley's note book a day or two before, and could not resist the opportunity to repeat some of his high-firing nonsense.

flying nonsense.
"How grand you are at description, Mr. Ho deret."
"How pretty you are at complimenting, Miss Gloriana."

"And how impudently you are flirting, Sir George -- "

We both turned round in amazemen

We note turned round in amagement.

Harrieg was standing close to us, with a whiter face than his wont. It was probably the affect of the moon; but in daylight I should have said he was jealous. In the present instance, there was of course not the slightest ground for there was of course not the slightest ground for such an absurd emotion.

"Why, Mr. Hartley, how foolish in you!"
whispered my companion, who at the same time approached a great deal nearer the intruder than suited my sense of propriety.

"Foolish! That is putting it too mild; im-pertment you should have said. What do you mean, Hartley?"

"Ch! nothing at all. I only wished to startle

"Oh! nothing at all. I only wished to startle you, and get a chance to join in this delightful enversation. Or rather, to be frank," and here he broke out into a queer laugh, "I am come at the suggestion of your uncle, Gloriana. He seemed to think that my friend might possibly need help in enterplains you." need help in entertaining you."

"Hang all cotton-umbrells-uncles," I mutter ed, half to myself,

"By-the-by," he continued, "we shall be an choring presently."

Sure sorugh, the words were scarcely out of his mouth, when the captain's boy came forward and began to lower sail. Next followed the grating sound of the descending chain. In three minutes we were safely moored, and in fifteen

I bowed with excessive courtesy to Gloriana's I howed with excessive courtesy to trioriana a uncir, as that shadowy personage came forward into unexpected prominence, and bestowed him-self upon his niece with the aspect of a pro-tecting spirit. The charm of the excursion was broken, and it mattered little whether Hartley or the cotton umbrella dominated. Besides, had the moonlight, if I could not have the lady

At this stage, the reader probably anticipates either a dissertation against all uncles, cousins, brothers, and the rest of that impertinent crowd of maiadroits who molest every watering-place with their unercapeable presence; or else baret of word painting in which ocean, purst of word painting in which ocean, cliffs, the lambent moon, &c, &c, should mingle won-derfully together. In that event, I can only say that bleesed is that man who sntidpateth no-thing, for he will not be discondited. thing, for he will not be disappointed. Beener is a very pretty thing to talk about, if you have pretty woman to talk it to: and uncles are unquestionable nulsances, but they are also dis-pensations of Providence, and therefore not lightly to be spoken of.

In the present ineffab at ineffable emergency, I did what every seaside philosopher would do-took out a oigar, and sought wisdom and consolation in smoke. Smoke, next to time, is, after al!, the great consoler.

As luck would have it, I found that I was without matches. Consequently, it became ne-cessary to return to the boatman. Therefore, a good pretext arose for lagging behind, which circumstance resulted in a favoring sequel, as

To get to Speuting Horn from the shore, one may mount a hill and then descend, or scale the immediate rocks, and be there in thirty seconds If a lady be in the case, the former approach is the only feasible one. If you are alone, and are supple-limbed, the quickest route is on the whol best. Naturally, I chose the latter, and was thus enabled to reach the ground very much before the others.

Watching them as they wound their way down, I noticed that Gioriana had somehow railen into Hartley's charge, while the cotton passion for a man, r umbreila was nowhere to be seen. The crash he ought to walk the of the water, as is plunged into the basin, pre-rented my hearing my of their yet it was easy to see in the moonlight that they were speaking with great earnestness. "Why, here is Mr. Hoderet I" suddenly broke saif. "And this is Spouting Horn," said Hartley, laying his hand on my shoulder, and look! if he would like to do the same thing in an firection.

"You each find what you were in search of,"

"You each find what you were in search of," I oblined in, maliciously, at the same time moving a little towards the water's edge, to make room for the new arrivala.

Gloriana pouted her lips most hewltchingly at this sail;, but neither Harriey nor herself vouch-safed any audible response. The fact was that they were both thicking a great deal more of the ocean than of myself. Indeed, under ordinary conditions I should have been in much the same frame of mind.

Overhead was the great man of harron with same frame of mind.

Overhead was the great span of heaven, with the stars keeply visible, although the moon shone clear. All around stood immease piles of bestling rock, which took in the usual amount of mystery in consequence of the partial dark ness. Below was the surging cessan, five hundred feet deep from the very edge of the narrow ridge on which we stood. In front rose a shaft of perphyritis stone, with coughly nerveed inside. ridge on which we stood. In front rose a shall of porphyritic stone, with equally perpendicular, though searcely as lofty, wings of rock jutting out against the water, and forming the two sides of a triangle. The waves dashing furiously in on one side of this natural bastion, and then sides of a triangle. The waves dashing furiously in on one side of this natural bastien, and then flung over to the other, or surging into the heliow of the main column, produced a very grand effect, though of course nobody but Hartley would have talked about Moora and knights, creevent and cross, and the rest of his note-book rubbish. The mere shock of the inflowing seamass, its power heightened by the heavy winds of the pravious afternoon, was terrible, while the roar of the crashing waves resembled an artillery battle.

illery battle. Gioriana's face flushed splendidly under the

"I owe you more than I can well express for suggesting this trip. It is positively grand."
"It is positively wet," was my splenette reply, to which a sudden dash of spray rendered unexpected emphasis. "Really this is getting toe shower, and I wonder that you are able to de without the cotton umbrells?"
"Why, yes," classified Hartley. "Where is your uncle?"
The young lade baked. "I owe you more than I can well express for

The young lady looked up the shelving sides of the circumj sent cliff in answer. But the old gentleman was pertinaciously invisible.

"One of us ought to go in rearch of him," said Hart'ey, oseing an appealing glance at me.

The shot miscarried. It is not my style to juncture as was the present, if the thing can in anywise be avoided. Busides, my friend had evidently quite forgotten the allegiance he owed to a certain ineffable personage in the violnity of Boston. "Suppose we all go back," sighed Glorians. No, wait here, I will find him :" and Hartley eprang away into the darkness.

It was the most natural thing in the world for my companion, now that we were alone, to take ny arm. Terror always mingles with grandeur, and the solitude even affected me. Human beings cling to each other at such moments

"That was a versitous interruption on the yacht. I have been in an ugly humor ever since."

"Never mind, it is all right now." She looked up so prettily as she said thir, that I could not restrain an explamation.

"What a giorious woman you are!" The words were coarsely out of my mouth than I re-gretted them. Curiously, she did not appear disposed to be angry. Indeed, it was I who was surprised at the next turn of the monologue.

"Do you roully like me, then?"

If the everlasting road beneath our feet had suddenly been rent by earthquake, it would not ave amazed me more than did this quartion. deavened was the girl in love with me I been decoved by my own mouth into the matrimonial snare? She was beautiful enough, cer-tainly. Any man, as the novelote say, would have been just fied in wishing such a wife. Only I was as far from feeling that sort of thing as I was from hanging myself. Bachelors on the see side these summer days can appreciate my perplexity, even if they have not expe For a moment my embarracement made me tongue tied. You don't answer. I hoped you would like me because-Hartley's voice from above interrupted her:

"Come up—quick, both of you; the tide is turning, and we must go."

I proferred my hand to Glorians, and we slowly ascended; the excitement and of the path preventing us from talking—and thus painfully prolonging the completion of her

For myself I was in so baste. It was likely to be my death senunce Though I didn't love one jot beyond reasonable friendship, yet if she loved mo-why there was no help in the matter. I have always held that if a woman confesses a passion for a man rather than she should suffer, he ought to walk the plank gracefully, and say in order to take breath.

"I was on the point of revealing a secret," said Gioriana, her face assuming a stranger expression—while I sembled at each eviable she uttered; all the were, indeed, became Hartley was coming towards us and would be sure to hear every word.

"The truth is you have been so good to me to day, that I can't help horing," i here her value seemed tremulous) "you like me, because," [at this crists I felt as if I should go mad, for Hartley was within ten feet, and must surely hear all,] "because I am—Hartley's wife."

"As you very surely are," joined the gentle-man thus alluded to, and emphasizing the as-sertion by a very singular breach of the proprinties.

"Well, George?" presently interrogated the "Well, George?" chimed in the other, he face tinged with blushes enough for two

The inordinate raptures which followed upon the disclosure enabled me to somewhat recover s not at all well, your impertinences. So abourdly transparent a strategem too! Of course I understood it from the first." course you did, George. And that was

"Of course you did, theorge. And that was why you let me run up that little yacht bill."

"And took me out to walk, too," chimed in the pittless Bratrice.

"Sans merei, each one of you. I shall..."

"Ever more like Trice... for Harriey's sake... now say it." And the bewitching creature caught my left hand, while her scapegrace husband ined the other.

It was positively embarrassing, and it was get

"We ought to be sailing home, you silly ones, How shout the tide, Hartley?"
"You will be tied here till you answer," was the peremptory response.

"And you are happily tied here and class where," said i, surrendering at discretion.

Concerning the aniabilities and the gentle nonsense that followed this compulsory avowal, it becometh myself not to speak, nor my readers to trouble themselves. Hartley confided to me that the champagne affair was a hoax, while agreed to be Gioriana henceforth in my Just then the old gentleman came up, and, as we walked down to the shore, he proved him self so unexpectedly entertaining and hearty that I forgave him for his part in the plot forth

And so we went salling home laughing over the lock of the day, and voting to put it on our calender for inture due observation. The next day we did not go to Boston. With which crumb a fact the present parrative will close .-

CARLYON'S YEAR.

By the author of " Lest Sir Massingberd," Ac.

CHAPTER IN GREYCHAGE.

"Mr. Crawford has not at present left his chamber, being uowell," was the reply given by the servant to Mr. Carlyon; "but Mr. Richard is somewhere about the grounds, and I will let him know you are here. Miss Crawford is in the drawing room, sir, if you will step this war."

Twice or thrice, but not more, Carlyon had had an opportunity of observing Aguse with at tention, but the thought that she had never tention, but he thought that she had never looked half so lovely as when rising heatily, though with grace, from a table at which she was putting some finishing touches to a drawing, she came forward to meet him with heightened color, and outstretched hand. On the day be her beauty had struck him indeed as won derful; but then it was something out of nature, if beyond it. The expectation of immediate death had glorified that charming face, and changed it to something celestial, it had pre-sented the chartered and unearthly leveliness scape. To-day, though radiant as a subbeam

A creature not too bright and good

Mr. Carlyon," said she, "I have to thank

"None, my dear madam," returned he. "Words are unnecessary: indeed they are. I read in your face that gratitude white a gene-

She smiled and shook her head. " As you lease," said she. "True courage, it is said, iways makes light of its own ac a; but when we left you vesterday at Mr. Carstairs' house, vos yourself again.

"Unhappily, madam, yee;" here he rei need her hand, and sighed. "They tell me I was under water a few seconds longer than your self and your cousin: otherwise a great hulk-ing feilow like me might to be ashamed of himself to have been the last to get his breath." "And your borse, Mr. Carlyon—I trust that ble borse has come safe to land?"

"He is standing in your stables at this mo-ment. It I could but let him know that you had seked after him, I am sure that Red Berild would be better pleased than with a feed of corn. His nature is obival: to except," added Carlyon, smiling, "that he never earns the

I have had another visitor this morning Mr. Carlyon, to whom, next to yourself, Richard and I are indebted for our preservation yeter-day; and for fear I should forget it, I will tell you at once that I have a favor to ask you in connection with him. When one owes one's life to a fellow oresture, it does not matter wha one over beside; the weight of obligation can not be increased; so you see I am quite shame

"Whatever the favor may be, it is granted, my dear Miss Crawford. You speak of William Millet, I suppose, whom I have just met upon

Then he probably asked you himself?" said Agues, eagerly. "No; although, of orarse, I would have obliged him any way. But he is very modest, to William"

"Very modest and very good," replied Miss awford, thoughtfully. "I don't know any one ford, thoughtfully, od in all Mellor."

"He does not seem a happy man, however, sort of air about him." There was the of playing a hypogrideal part to please this beautiful girl, and he remented his own weak-

"If William Millet has corrows," usp! Agnes, confidently, "they are not his own. His heart, like the pelican's breast, bloods for others, not for himself."

"Yee; he has a worthless, drunken father, poor fellow," said Carlyon, abruptly; "that must be a bitter bane to any man."

"Yes, indeed, Mr. Carlyon; you and I cannot know how bitter. I say you from hearesy only; but if what everybody agrees in must needs be true, you were exceptionally blessed in your father."

" He was a man of the strictest religion and plety," returned Carlyon.

The extreme coldness of his tone could scarcely have escaped her-and indeed it was intended to be observed—but she went on as though she had not heard it.

"In that case, you ought to feel pity for those who are less fortunate in their parents."

"I do pity William Millet, Miss Crawford. If you ask me to pity Stephen, a man whe for a glass of glu has put a life like yours, to say nothing of your cousin's aud mine, in deadliest peril, I cannot do it."

perit, I cannot do it."
"I ask you to forgive him," said Agnes, pleadingly.

William has asked me to do that already, and I have done it. I have promised also to try my bent to get the old man forgiven, although that will be no easy task in Mellor, where, i you had periabed, they tell me every household rould have lost its truest friend."

"No, sir, no," said Agnes, hastily; "poor folks are thankful for small kinduceses, and magnify them in their talk. But to this house-hold—that is, to my poor father—my loss would have been doubtiess great. The very nearness of such a calamity (for such it would have doubtless been to him) affected him very deeply; he showed bimself far from well at Woodless esterday, Richard tells me."

Yes, he was twice overcome, although I did not understand the cause; but at your father's age there is nothing surprising in such seizures, particularly since he has been such an invalid

"Jost so," said A ynes, la low earnest tones "there is nothing surprising. You will not be disturbed therefore, if, when you come to see us, as he hopes you often will, he should occasignally give way in a similar manner. I am afraid he is scarcely well enough to see you to-day, although I know he counts upon the pleasure of your dining here on Thursday—ludeed, I had, at his request, written you this formal invitation—which, as you see, only awaits the postman."

"I accept it very gladly," said Carlyon ; "not with stancing which, oblige me by not tearing up the note. It will remind me—although, indeed, I am not likely to forget it—of the engagement. Its you always act as your father's amanueness thus, Miss Crawford?"

"Always: I have done so for some years Even his business matters—except just where his signature is necessary—are entirely transact-ed by me. You smile, as though you doubted my fitness for each a post; but I assure you, I son very exact and methodical."

" Nay, I was only envelog the attorney whom Mr. Crawford employs," said Carlyon, simply.
Tone and genture were both wanting, which should have accompanied a compliment so highflown. The young girl blushed deeply, and flown. The young girl blushed deeply, and there cusued an embarasing pause.

"Toat drawing of yours reminds me," resumed Carlyon, pointing to the table, "of the pretext on which I have ventured to intrude upon you. This sketch-book was found upon the saud-this morning, as well as a camp stool, which the finder will bring with him before night; it is yours, I conclude, although I am afrail it can be of no further use." afraid it can be of no further use.

Miss Crawford looked very grave at the eight of this memento of her late peril. "I thank you much, Mr. Cariyon. It is useless, as you say, for its original purpose; but I am very glad to have it. It will serve to remind me of the Providence which mercifully preserved me in so terrible a strait; as well," added she, with franknees, "of the brave gentleman who risked his life—nay, almost lost is—to save that of mere My unfinished sketch, I perceiveat angers. My unfinished sketch, I perceive—" mighty, who made the whole world, and ten bere her voice faltered in spite of her utmost ef. thousand other worlds for all we know, cares forts at self-command - bas vanished from the block. Surely the sea could not have taken all the color out.

"I assure you, dear Miss Crawford, on my conor," explained Carlyon, carnestly, "that I have ventured to take no such liberty. The ook is just as it came into my hands."

"Nay, there would have been no great harm," returned the, smiling, "even had you committed such a theft. The wrecker, I am afraid, who-ever he is, will have gained but a worthless

"There I differ from you," said Carlyon. never before properly appreciated my manorial rights to Flottsam and Jettsam: I will punish e rescal who has thus deprived me of them with all the rigor of the law-that is, I would if could. From whence is the sketch taken should know those bills well enough: that is Wynthrop Pike, is it not? and that Cold Harbor

No. the Dad is here in the middle distance although I dareasy it is my fault that it is not recognizable. It is taken half way up the crage; a most glorious place for a view, show you the very spot."

"I should like that of all things," answered Carlyon, eagerly. "Greycrage has been no well preserved a sanctuary since your father's time, that I have quite forgotten the view from your

She took up the summer hat that lay on the chair beside her, and, with the drawing in her hand, stepped out through the open window on the lawn, which sloped up to the wood-crowned height to southward. Two winding walks, to left and right, led to the top of this hill; and both of them had several little level resting-places, or plateaus, provided with seats either places, or plateaus, provided was for rest or erjoyment of the extensive prospect or nest or erjoyment of the extensive prospect ed the windows of the drawing room they had just left, R chard Crawford was seated they has just lett, it chard Crawford was seated reading, or, at least, with a book in his hand. He did not seem to observe Carlyco and his conein. He had taken up his position on the left hand walk; and when the point was reached where the two diverged, Agues, after a moment's

We halted after we had gotten half way up, shadow of a sacer upon this last sentence, onet by the speaker's said-contempt, not contempt of secured to have yied with one another in aderuscited with tenderess one, and placed it in his subject. Carlyon felt that he was in danger of Blaying a hypogridual part to please this secured to have yied with one another in aderuscite with tenderess one, and placed it in his breast pecket.

"I was on the points of revealing a screet," of playing a hypogridual part to please this secured to have yied with one another in aderuscite with tenderess one, and placed it in his breast pecket.

"I will make a frame for it with my own stablishment was scarcely sufficient to keep in order such extensive grounds; but still the lawn on which you looked down as every turn of the shady zigzeg, was kept smooth and shaven, and the flower beds in their emerald setting glowed with harmonious hues. A terrace-wa'k-now diminished to a strip of gravel-ran round the communed to a strip of gravel—ran round the house, and this was set with urns full of roar-liet blossom. As they moved higher, above the level of the houseroof, the prospect to the north-west, to which we have alluded, began to expand itself, and for the spectators an alcove had been eracted at the most elegible point of view.

"This is the place from which I took this drawing, Mr. Carlyon," said Agnes; "and I think you owe me an epology for mistaking Windy Scar, youder, for Cold Harbor Dod, whose hump, I datur myself, I have represented with great fidelity. I have always been taught to prefer truth to beauty, independently of the that the former is always attainable, and the latter not"

"The post tells us they are the same," as swered Carlyon, 'Beauty is truth—truth beauty; and when I look at your face, Miss Crawford, I do believe him."

do balleve bim."

"Mr. Carlyon, I am not used to listen to compliments," said Agner, rising from the beach with quiet dignity; "and, to tell you the truth—or the beauty, since you say the terms are synonymous—it is a taste which I do not wish to acquire."

"You alsogether misconceive my unfortunate observation, dear Miss Crawford," replied Carobservation, dear Miss Crawford," replied Carlyon, humbly; "but pray sit down. I will take care not to offend sgain, even in appearance. You make light of my poet's dogma, it appears; hope and do not do not do not do. I hope you do not flut at all bards, as Meg-that is Mrs. Newman-does. A painter like yeur-self should surely be on friendly terms with the must confess—making all allowance for my own lack of intelligence—that the claims which its admirers often put forth are somewhat extravagant. Poets seem to me to be the most thought marvellous skill the innermost chords being; but as high-pricets of our spiritual life I do not recognize their authority."

"You do not believe in the inspiration of the muse, then ?"

Yes I do; but not in the same sense in which I believe in the inspiration of the Scrip-

"Pienary?" asked Mr. Carlyon, smiling
"You surely don't believe, with Mr. Job Salver that the Bible was dropped from Heaven in s ump, and in the vulgar tongue?

"Oh, sir, I am an ignorant girl, and know no thing of what you hint at. But this I know, that when folks want comfort on their sick beds they only get it from one book."

"You are speaking of uneducated, simple people, such as you find about here." "Yes: or in other words, of about pineteen twentieths of our fellow creatures. Of the other twentieth—the educated classes—about one twentieth again, perhaps, have really any genu-ine poets feeling. Thus the influence of the poets, however powerful, is restricted within very narrow limits. It is idle to epeak of them as supplying the spiritual place of those inspired of mankind."

"My dear Miss Crawford," returned Carlyon, laughing. "if it be possible that Dietor Samuel Johnson has been permitted to reap-pear upon the earth's surface in the form of a fair lady, she is certainly before me now. You make me believe in the doctrine of metempsy

"I wish I could make you believe in some thing better and truer," returned the young girl gravely. "Well, try. I should like you to have as good an opinion of me as you have of William Millet."

" Nay, sir, but that is impossible." "Dear me," quoth Carlyon; "why this is worse measure than I should get from Mr. Puce himself. Surely he would estimate the Squire of Mellor above a cockler's son. "Do you suppose, Mr. Carlyon, that God Alighty, who made the whole world, and ten other a man is a king or a cookler "No, Miss Crawford; nor, indeed, do I care, either. You are wasting your energies in preching equality to one of 'the Mountain' like

And yet I see a pride in this very humility of yours, Mr. Carlyon. Every man is equal you say. You bend to no one, and you wish the numblest to treat you as man with man. And when you rode down senterday into the awa of death-"Into the mouth of hell," interrupted Car lyon, finishing the quotation Nav, I do not say that; God in His mercy forbid!" continued Agnee, fervently; "bu forbid !" all that concourse upon the shore who would paril his life to save that of others, you generous than other men. On, sir, it is not well know, to say such things to your face; I see t embarrasses your nature to hear them; yet it a my duty to speak. Courage is good; but that is not courage which in the favored servant leads him to defy his master to whose forbear ance he is indebted; that is not courses, but a his God.' Miss Crawford," returned Carlyon, slowly, I thank you. I am not se wilfully blind but that I can perceive you mean to do me a good service. We will talk of these things some other time together, as proprastinating Festus said to Paul. My visit to Greyerage has already been unconscionably long; in remembrance of it, however—especially of this interview—may I beg for that chaik drawing, that admirable half-length of my old friend, Cold Harbor Ded. Come, or else I shall think you vexed because your elequence has not con-verted me upon the instant. You know it is quite the custom for these who would gain spirit Come to church, and you will get coals and blankets at Christman, says Mr. Puce to the die

At you will," said Agnes, sighing ; " you are ery welcome to my poor drawing, eir."
Her cheeks were pale, the light which had very wei hesitation, took the other.

That, certainly, was a fair spot from which the good felks of Mellor had been shut out by gone out. Carlyon, on the other hand, looked hands," cried he joyfulty; "no enver and gilder shall touch it. Like the good aid emperor of old, you may say to yourself. Miss C. awford, that you have not misspent this day, since you that you have not menture happy."

bave made a fellow creature happy."

Slowly, and in a elleno broken only by one or two conventional phrases, the two descended the hill. Richard had dewhen they reached the drawing-room, and the herse had been ordered to be brought round,— "I must go out and see Red Berild!" exolalmed Agnes.

claimed Agnes.

"Ab, do so," said Carlyon; "although he never looks so well, se powerful, and yet so gentie, as when he is carrying a lidy."

So she went out to where the noble creature

So she went out to where the cood, pawing the gravel, and patt stood, pawing the gravel, and patted his arching neck approvingly, and whispered in his pricking ears bow grateful she felt to him.

"On Taureday we shall see you at dinner, Mr. Carlyon." were her less than the statement of the Carlyon," were her last words.

"Without fail," answered he, with a warmth that contrasted with her quiet tones; and so they shook hands and parted. Rapt in happy thought, and ever and anot couching his breast pocket as though to assure bimself that his treasure was safe, Carlyon rodesiowly away; and when he and his steed has come to a resired part of the road, and out of eyeshot of the house, he leaned forward and hissed that neck upon which Agnes Crawford's hand had lingered so lovingly.

SATURDAY BYBNING POST.

PHILADELPHIA, BATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1867.

Northe -- We do not return rejected manu scripts, unless they come from our regular cor-respondente. Any postage stamps sent for such return will be confiscated. We will not be responsible for the safe keeping or return of any

OUR NOVELETS.

We commenced on July 27th, a new an assinating novelet, called

CARLYON'S YEAR.

By the author of "Lost Sir Massingberd." Our readers who remember that powerful and eculiar story, "Lost Sir Massingberd," will need no persuasion to induce them to read "Carlyon's Year"-the interest of which, they will perceive, commences in the very first

Back numbers to May 4th, containing the vhole of the powerful novelet of "Lond ULB WATER," can be had upon application.

We can also supply a few back numbers to the first of the year.

THE CHOLERA.

While unripe fruits should not be eaten at any time, unless prepared by cooking, it is a great mistake to suppose that the way to avoid cholera is by abatinence from good, sound fruits

So far is this from being the case, that such batinence generally results in costiveness first, and the opposite extreme afterwards.

Some physicians hold that thus diarrhous and dynamieries are often scorbuile in their character the results of a diet in which vegetables beries and fruits have not had their proper share. A correspondent of the Daily Press of this dty, gives his experience in the army as follows:

"During the war thousands of soldiers cured themselves of diarrt or 4, when the surgeons were completely baffled, by eating very freely of fresh well fried beef, seasoned well while cooking with

At other times, and at proper seasons, green orn, well reasted would cure them. Plenty of reen apples, or any fruit, would bring sure re-of. The demands of nature were the law in those cases, the diet and exposure of the soldier being peculiar and different from home fare where each remedies would not be apt to be so where such remedies would not be apt to be so beneficial. It is important for all people to re-member that the natural appetite, keenly mani-fested, generally guides to some article of food that will bring relief in their cases."

The same gentleman also gives the following receipt for diarrhoa: "Take one tempoonful of salt, the same of good vinegar, and a table spoonful of water; mix and drink. It acts like a charm on the system, and even one dose will generally cure obstinate cases of diarrhon or the first stages of choiers. If the first does not bring complete relief, repeat the dose, as it is quite harmless. The patient should keep perfectly quiet, a reclining poeture being best. In severe cases soak the feet thoroughly in very warm water, chafing them well. Finnel wet with pretty warm vinegar and salt (especially in warm weather) and placed around the loine, wrapping warm finnel over it, is an excellent spoonful of water; mix and drink. It acts like wrapping warm flannel over it, is an excellen aid to recovery. Any and every body can apply these remedies without a physician, runnin risk, and will be astonished at the beneficial result. They should be universally known."

In recommending the eating of fruit and vegr-tables, we do not recommend, be it remember-ed, the eating of them at improper times, and in immoderate quantities. Three times a day is often enough to eat. Feasting on perches, watermelons, &c, before going to bed, will not as a general thing be found promotive of health and good direction. and good digestion.

Eas all you want, but not more than you want, at your regular meals. Ecjoy the ripe fruits and the vegetables of the season. Do not take excessive exertion, if you can help it, of body or mind or soul. Be temperate, be moderate, and be cheerful, in all your employments and relaxations. Those are the best rules we can give for the summer season.

One of the saddest descriptions one can

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

STEPHEN DANE. By AMANDA M. DOUGLASS. ablished by Lee & Shepard, Beston. This is a bock which one will read through swiftly for the plot—and returning, linger lovingly over the many fresh and hopeful philosophies with which the pages abound. It portrays the gradual waking up and unfolding of a man's soul, which bound down and warped by poverty and circounstance, is yet, root like, vaguely conceined of air and sunshine and keener life somewhere beyond. Hindered and vexed, but with infinite out-reachings, it sends forth first a shoot and then a tendril, and presently works itself up into the perfect day.

"Siephen Dane stood there in the decreay, his eyes wandering riverward. Did you ever exhis eyes wandering riverward. Did you ever experience a curious sensation on looking over a river, that some help would come from the other side, an indistinct but longed-for blassing? That peaceful country, lying in the purple haze of distance, seems like a nearer Heaven, instants with spiritual life.

"He was glancing over there now, and in a vague way felt this. He did not know what it was he wanted, only the luminous atmosphere floating there on the silver stream or drifting was he wanted, only the luminous atmosphere floating there on the silver stream, or drifting beyond, up the shadowy slopes, stirred his soul with something intangible, perplexing. For twenty-three years he had vegetated in content. Slept, eaten, worked—that was all. Not level nor hated, nor struggled nor hoped.

"He was groping about blindly,
"For all the radiance of the sun he could not see. The eyes of the soul are so faint and uncer-

see. The eyes of the soul are so faint and uncertain at first. But he wanted something that tain at first. But he wanted something that was in the river, in hills beyond, in the spring-tide sky. What was it? He could not tell. Everything was so vague, so unformed wishin him. It seems an easy thing to say to a blind, groping soul, 'Let there be light;' but we are none of us Goda. And just them there was no one to say it to Stephen Dane. So he looked with hungry, longing, unreasoning eyes."

After this waking up of the soul comes a crime—not his own; a mystery, a burden to be borne, a shame to be concealed. Removal to another sphere of action with its consequent opportunities of culture—opportunities eagerly portunities of culture—opportunities eagerly sought for and gained—educates the man to a sought for and gained—educates the man to a plane of thought which before seemed inconceivable. An idea long pondered upon is brought te a successful issue, and Stephes Dane stands forth before the world, the inventor of a patent steam apparatus, from which daves a new era in the history of machinery. Flows in upon the man "renown, and power, and friends, and gold"—self-tutured, self-controlled, he arrives at the embodiment of a noble, gracious continues.

After months of patient waiting, of generous actions misconstrued, the perfect crown of I

The book is fresh and noble, pure and tree; its moral that in suffering only, is the highest level possible to humanity, the largest life at-

DOMEST AND SON. By CHARLES DIEKERS.
People's Edition. With Illustrations by H. K.
Browne. Published by T. B. Peterson & Bros.,
Palls. A glance merely into this work, brings back the mixed feelings of delight and sorrow with which we first read it. Little Paul Florence, Walter, Edith, Mr. Dombey, Captain Cuttle, Cousin Feenix, Mejor Baget ck-who that has read of them once, can ever forget MARIE ANTOINETTE AND HER FON. An Histori-II. And East Orners and HECON. An Illustration of Coaph II. and his Court," & y. With Illustrations. Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York; and sleo for sale by D. Achmead, Chestnut street, Phila.

NED NEVIKS, THE NEWSBOY; OR STREET LIFE IN BOSTON. By HENRY MORGAN, (Poor Man's Preacher.) Illustrated. Published by Lee &

Seven Years of a Sailon's Life. By Grosse EDWARD CLARK. ('Yaukee Ned," of Lynn, Mass.) With Nine Illustrations. Engraved from the Author's Sketches. Published by Adams & Co., Boston; and also for sale by J.

Lippincott & Co., Phila.
This is said to be no fiction, but a plain and truthful narrative, written by a sailor, and one whose seven years of service were replete with startling interest. Adopting sea-life when quite young, he sailed for Calcutta, and suddenly round young, he sailed for Calcutta, and suddenly touns himself, with others, among whom was Dr. Ras, of Giasgow, and a French lady, with her daughcoast of Africa, where they fell into the hands of the Soumaulies, one of the most fierce and warlike of the tribes inhabiting that country. THE LIFE AND DEATH OF JASON. A Poem. By WILLIAM MORRIS. Published by Roberts Brethers, Beston; and also for sale by J B Lipincott & Co., Phila. The London critics speak very highly of Mr. Morris's poem. The Atheracum says for instance that "Mr. Morris poem. trays the spirit, the manners and the localities of the ancient Greeks, as if he had been one of them." The poem is one of 300 pages, and is them." The poem is one of 300 pages, and is mainly in the heroic couplet.

mainly in the heroic couplet.

Dixie Cookeny; on, How I Managed My
Table for Twalve Yrans. A Practical Cook Book for Southern Housekeepers. By Mrs.
Barringer, of North Carolina. Published by Loring, Boston; and also for sale by G. W. Pitcher, Polla. Price 50 cents. THE HALF YEARLY ABSTRACT OF THE MEDICAL SCIENCES. Published by H. C. Les, Phila.

The First Book of Paradise Lost; is Ryhme. By Robert E Clark. Published by & Schaffer, Lynchourg, Virginia. Portions of this versification are well dot see no reason for doing it at all. We fear Mr. Clark will have simply his labor for his pains suless he may consider self improvement a sufficient reward. We would not dissuade im however from completing his task, only from publishing any more of his work, un'est he can find some publisher who will assume the EX. CLAC. BURIED ALIVE. By ALEXANDER DOMAS. Published by T. B. Peterson & Bros., Phila

FEMALE SUPPRAGE. -- In Michigan the Constitutional Convention has rejected the amend-ment made by the Committee of the Whole to the article on elections, extending suffrage ! women, by a vote of forty-six to twenty-two. It is curious, however, that there should be so many as 92 hen-pecked busbands in the Michigan

Western newspapers are always great in e most extensive statement of this kind we have lately seen is that the town of " Fort Sc requires but two things to make it one of the largest cities in the world, and these are build-ings and population."

Letter from Paris.

FOR THE SATURDAY STREETS POST.

The opening of the great French "Exposition Universelle" took place as announced, the prizes have been awarded, and though the dis prizes have been awarded, and though the dia and smoke are yet lingering around, there is quiet and light enough perhaps to reply to the natural question, whether it has been a success or a falture? An answer either way may be correct, according to the purpose for which it was actually intended. If for the purpose of making money it has doubtless been a success-if for the purpose of advancing science and improving art most probably a failure. In regard to the money making question, it certainly has drawn to Parls many crowned heads, a score of princes and princesses, with dukes and my lords and my ladies in their train, and a large class of people who are never happy but when breathing the same qualified atmosphere. Then, too, it has drawn an immense concourse of people who only regard the Exposition as affording an ext aordinary opportunity for acquiring money—the method of accomplishing this end being entirely dependent upon the special views of the individual. Then there are numbers who have visited the Exhibition from the mere love of novelty and exottement; and many really of novelty and excitement; and many really with the purpose of benefiting society by ad-vancing science and art, or obtaining a new idea and making a profitable use of it for themselves tising, and the competition in this respect has been very great; cards of all descriptions, deco corated and undecorated, colored, varnished and gilded have circulated in every direction to let you know when the methandies to be and gilfed have circulated in every direction to let you know where the merobandise is to be obtained and the readiest mode of access, some of them giving in colored lines the route by which from the Exposition you may reach their shops or factories. The Emperor and his wife—the city of Paris from its highest functionary to its poorest ouvrier, indeed all France has worked with untiring exertion to draw "a full house." This effort has undoubtedly produced a great show, and the whole affair instead of what it should have been, has recolved itself into a vast museum or bazaar, in which are to be seen not only iron works and wax works of all seen not only iron works and wax works of all kinds, together with stuffed lions and bottled reptiles, but also the living specimens of men and beast—the high dignitaries in place of being confined within bars or under glass cases are moving about, generally, however, surrounder by an ample body guard of sergents do ville, or as we would call them "policemen." Then it is a great speciacle, if only by reason of the people traversing the long sides and circulating in the grounds, in their motley coetumes, from of the desert to the leg of muttor whiskered Eoglishman. In many respects it is Barnum's on a grand scale, only is Barnum's the frequenters confine themselves to cating a nuts or oranges, whilst here you can hav iced champagne, with turbot or salmon, or a glass of beer or honey cake at your pleasure. It is not known, whether with the other statis-tics of the Exhibition, we shall over have those of the heart donn't. of the beer drunk or meats eaten each day, bu of the oper orang or mean eaten can can, the consumption is certainly very great, especially of beer, which at present seems to be the fashionable driak, not only of the persons visiting the Exhibition, but of all Paris. Everywhere the tables of the cafes, the restaurants and trateurs are surrounded with men and women richly or plainly dressed, as it may be, with the chopps or book or glasses of Strasburg, Bavarian, English or Viennoise beer before them. In years past the tables would have presented an array of wine bottles, and wine then was and now is probably as cheep as beer-but beer is la mode. The Prussians drink beer in a non-vine growing country, and the English also in a non-vine growing country give it the preference Why is it then that the French in a vine grow ing country have taken to beer? They certainly have no love for Prussian or Eaglishmen-per haps they think that drinking beer may be more conducive to strength, for Prussia and England muscle. Strange as it may appear the Americans, always so much abused for their excessive cans, always so mach abused for their excessive use of strong drinks, are the only people who have a department where you can obtain an ex-cellent unalcoholic drink. Boston enterprise sent to the Exhibition large fountains, from which you can have sods water, with lemon strawberry or any other syrup almost as good as you can get it in B ston itself or in Pailsdelhis. These fountains are put up in the neusl handsome style, with ailver-plated recervoirs, and the cups of silver plate to hold the glass of cold sparkling water-and no better drick can in all Paris. But we are wandering for the point which was to resolve whether the Exhibition was a success, and we think that if the object was money-making, then it has most probably been a great success. Two years of preparation and advertising and puffing all over the world, together with the letting cut of stalls and booths for the sale of every imaginable article, from a fic idous Turkish cigar or a penny photograph of the Emperor to almost priceices lace and diamonds, must have produced a large sum, which, added to the price of entrance of a frace for each process. franc for each person, the average daily number being about fifty thousand, will no doubt bring up the amount sufficiently to pay all coets and leave a handsome surplus. To these actual should be added the money extract ed from the pockets of the visitors by devices of every kind. Here may be mentioned that one of the annoyances of a visit to the Exposition is the assiduity with which many of the exhibitors. hibitors urge upon you the examination and purchase of their various articles. The words "Universal Museum" or "Basaar" would have better expressed the thing which has been got up than "Exposition." For example, the English department contains articles of furniture, some of silver, made for their kings long since dead, cups and vases won by racing clubs half a century ago; bronzes and potteries, old armor, war clubs and amuless, belonging to the times of the Celts and ancient Romans; the Countees of Dudley's jewelry, and the Prince of Esterhany's old clothes garnished with pearls, and a world of things having about as much to do with a legitimate exposition as Prester John's preserved little finger or the preparation of a double beaded calf.
The French have also their curiosities and antiuities, and Italy and other nations make the like a xhibitions. These things certainly belong rather to a musuem than to the manifestation of the present capabilities of a nation. Thus whilet the Exposition may be said as a moneyeme to have been successful, on the other hand it might perhaps be easily shown

The last King of the French, Louis Philippe,

was always accused of being fond of money, it would be out of place now to consider that question; but the present Emperor certainly is, and he has shown it in the manner in which he leads off in this Exhibition, not sparing even his own child in forming part of the great show. It is not, however, in this only that you can see the love of money peeping out, for it appears all over Paris, and whilst the Emperor is extolled for the princely amounts which have been lavished on the city of Paris since his regime, we must remember that when he came to the is vished on the city of Paris since his regime, we must remember that when he came to the throne he was pennyless, and but little examination will shew that all these improvements have been made with a view of recuring his power or making money. The wast and magnificent barracks which he has erected in the different quarters of the city are to gain the love of the soldiery and control the péople—the cubical block stone pavements which have been taken up, and mastic and Macadam ones which have been substituted are merely military precautions, as stone blocks are readily torn up and converted into street barricades. Take the Park Monceau as an illustration of this money-making propensity. This property belonged to the Duke of Odrana. Galignani says that "in 1852 it returned to the state." It soon under Napoleon III. became the property of the city; it was returned to the state." It soon under Napoleon III. became the property of the city; it was then laid out and planted and adorned, until the lots all around it became very desirable, these bring part of the same property were parted with at excellent prices; and as the domain becomes less, slice after slice is taken from the park for the like purpose, and how soon the whole may disappear, and the purchasers be disappointed as to their beautiful locations, cannot be told. The same scheme access to have combe told. The same scheme seems to have commenced with the beautiful gardens of the Luxem bourg; the same process of absorption has ap-parently commenced with the great esplanade in front of the Hotel des Invalids—the whole of In froat of the Hotel des invalue—the whole of the Champ de Mars is occupied by the money-making job of the "Exposition Universelle," and the Champs E yes are fast filling up with restaurants, and bail and concert saloons. But, Mr. Eistor, I am writing too much, (more per-haps than you will care to publish, but if you do it as at your service) and it s at your service,) and
With best regards,

Dollars, and Dollars.

The new "Dominion of Canada" is exercised The new "Dominion of Canada" is exercised because the $\xi$ sign was not invented for its special use. A Toronto paper says:—"It is suggested that the letter D be used for dollars in the Dominion instead of $\xi$, which is a contraction of the letters U. S. and stands for United States. The adoption of D is urged on the grounds that it is particularly appropriate as being the initial letter of Dominion as well as Dollar, and moreover, that it would show the ourrency meant without any other distinctive mark. For example, $\xi$ would at once convey the idea of United States currency, and D Dominion currency."

nion currency."

Where did the Canadian editor make the over the care the Canadian color make the novel discovery that $ was a contraction for U. S.? It has generally been supposed to stand for the figure 8, and to mean eight reals, which was the value of the Spanish dollar from which our colo was imitated. The two parallel lines were drawn across the "8" to distinguish it form the editions appropriate.

from the ordinary numeral.

There is another origin sometimes given to this design, which refers to the old pillar-dollar. There were on that coin two pillars or column connected by a scroll, and the $ bears a rude recemblance to this device.

But whichever may be the true derivation of the hieroglyph, the New Dominion may dismiss its anxiety on the subject. The sign is not the frankiev on the subject. The sign is not the special "Yankee institution" the Toronto writer fancies, and even though it should continue in use by the reconstructed Canadians, few people will be likely to mistake their silver dollar for me county, Mo. Mr. Dunlap Gay of Boone county, Mo. has a mare, on whose side was a lump about the size of a man's head. A short time since he concluded to have it opened, with a view to its removal, and asked F. C. Brown to perform the operation, which he did. The protuberance being opened was found to contain four black that the protuberance of foot long, all alive, as white heads.

The bran which is so carefully sifted out of flour, is rather more nutritious than the fine flour itself. The oily parts of the grain lie mostly near the surface. The less finely bolted dour is undoubtedly more nutritious and whole-some than the finest and whitest samples.

General Grant must have a great deal to say, he has said so little in the course of his

It seems that Dr. Cummings made a trifling error in his calculations concerning the total destruction to take place in 1867. In revising this work he found that he had over-looked figures which add something like a quinyears to the race which this mundane ephere has to run.

Get too many suits brought for you by lawyer, and you will get none brought to

The Boston Post says a Connecticut Yankes made his way from Middletown to Kan-eas, with only one dollar in his pocket by a systematic plan of getting on trains and allowing himself to be put off again only to take the next one that come along.

An eccentric senior student of Oberlin, is to go wholly naked, divests himself of the en cumbrance of clothing at every apportunity. On Monday he took a naked country ramble, and at last accounts his classmates were acouring the country in search of him.

A watch chain company in Rhode Island have invented a chain machine, which is one of the most ingenious and elaborate pieces of work ever devised. This machine takes the bar of gold and transforms it, without noise, to the most delicate and substantial fob and vest

A correspondent of the Marietta (Ohio) Register tells a queer story of a young gentle-man of that neighborhood, who, while indulging in a smoke during a ride with a young lady, ac eidentally set fire to her dress, and they only put out the fire and saved her life by a re-sort to some active meserres, and a "mud puddle" by the roadside. The young lady, after the configration was over, struck a by-path to the bouse of a friend, where she got a change of clothing.

Jean Ingelow, the celebrated English poeters, is said to be more charming than beautiful-more intellectual than good-looking, is unmarried, and about twenty-eight years of

"Call Me Pet Names," A SKETCH.

Clustering rose vines at the window and half-dropped curtains of rosy color gave a twilight aspect to the room. She's at the piano, thinking herself alone, and singing Mrs. Osgood's deli-cately-voluptoous "Call me pet names, dar-ing," which sounds as if it might be a trans-titude of the suppression of supplements of supple-

She sang, and he stood lietening unseen at the door. She had not heard his entrance, nor his footfall in the carpeted hall, and else sat with her face turned from the door, intent upon her song and its accompaniment.

upon her song and its accompaniment.

It had been a rainy swaming; she was not looking for visitors, not even for those half-demented members of acciety volvot "devoted lovers;" she was rather on dishabilis, but—love is blind—and he did not see the dingy wrapper nor the curl papers; he only beheld the white columnar throat, the gracefully-poised head, and drooping shoulders.

Why did she sing that tender lyric in a voice Why did she sing that tender lyric in a voice so inarticulate, so smothered?—so different from her usual ringing, operatic tones? Did she feel the emotion with which it is surcharged? was her voice faltering and choked with feeling—she, whom he had been ready to denousce as heartless; who langhed at the empiry of seve, and shook her curls defiantly when begged "to be serious?"

Call me pet names, darling-Call me thy bird.

How smothered and low the words! He would give much to know if there were not toars in her beautiful eyes, and tell tale color burning ber obeeks. here! He was almost sure there was a sol in those last low tones! He crept cautiously over the carpet and paused when her profile was revealed. Heavens and earth! what a spectacle for a doting lover? He saw ber remove from her snuff stained mouth a huge, dirty-looking stick mop, which she swabbed around vigorously in a black bottle, and then reinserting it—covered with snuff—between her lips, went on with her song :-

Call me pet names, darling-Call me thy flower.

The secret of the smothered tones was revealed—snuff and not stifling emotion! He groaned aloud over the disenchantment. With groand about over the disence anneals. We assert a screen, the fair smull eater started to her feet, overturning the piano-stool and the precious snuff-bottle, and dropping the mop from between her lips. She faced him a moment with staring eyes, our papers on end, with amaxement and mortification, and a little rivulet of liquid snuff. running down from each corner of her mouth; when, with another faint by terical shriek, the when, with another faint hysterical strict, the calico wrapper vanished through the doorway, and, picking up his hat, the lover made his way back to his lodgings, "a sadder and a wiser man," and leaving the moon for once uncontemplated, crept to his hed to drasm of being daubed with soulf by a gigantic mop in the hands of a Fury in a calloo wrapper, with hair "done up" upon hissing vipers. And as she daubed, she reresched in concert with other invisible Furies—

Call me pet names, darling, Call me thy tobacco worn

The Goldsboro' (North Carolina) News is responsible for the above little sketch.

MAN COMPOSED OF ALL OTHER ANIMALS -distinguished German professor recently an nounced that if one drop of human blood was placed under a microscope capable of magnify-ing it twenty million times larger, it would show all the kinds of animals that ever have existed, or now exist, on the earth. In the blood of a healthy person the animals are quiet; in that of a sick person they fight. From this he draws the conclusion that man has within him all the elements from which the universe was created. He further says, that if a dead cat was flung in a pool of water and left to decompose, the drops of water would show, when under a microscope, all the animals belonging to the cat species.

Fano .- The World save that in New York reside about four hundred and fifty men who earn their livelihood solely by decoying fools to fare. per annum. Some weeks a professional may clear many hundreds of dollars, again for weeks he may receive no commissions whatever; but computing the losses and gains of the seasons, his yearly profits may be estimated at the figures just given. A circus actor, a heavy outside operator, recently enticed forty-two hundred dollare from the pockets of a countryman into the coffers of a fare bank up town.

INSULTING MESSAGES -A short time back an acrimonious spirit sprang up between the staffs of the electric telegraph employees of London and Paris, which, at length, grew to such a pitch as to threaten to impede the transmission of dispatches. When business was slack the clerks would address each other in terms of not the most polite nature, and more than once did they express the regret that man had not been blessed with largers and man had not been blessed with longer legs, so that they might give their opponent a good hicking. The matter was at length taken up by the French Government authorities, who dismissed the more disorderly

LIBERALITY.-Many measure their charities by a peculiar standard. A man who has but a dollar in his pocket would give a penny for aldollar in his pocket would give a peany for al-most any purpose. If he had a hundred dollars, he might give one dollar. Carry it higher and there is a falling off. One hundred tollars would be considered too large a sum for him who has ten thousand, while a present of one housand dollars would be deemed a miracle for a men worth one hundred thousand, yet the proportion is the same throughout, and the poor man's penny, the widow's mite, is more than the rich man's high sounding, and widely trampted

Thackersy speaks of a place in Ireland where the sense of siegancs was so keen that the servants brought up the coals for the parier

The following is one of the last puz-

BED.

Explanation .- A darkey (dark-e) in hed with nothing (0) over it.

Dumb Dogs.

The following curious fact in natural history securs in a letter from the Mauritius to Profes-The fellowing curious fact in natural history occurs in a letter from the Maaritius to Professor Bell of King's College, London: In coming from Lechlies hither we tenched at Joan de Nova, where I had an opportunity of seeing, for the first time, an island of purely ceral formation. It is of a horse-shoe shape, about twenty-one miles long, and from a half to three quarters of a mile broad, with extensive reses around it abounding with turtle. Dogs of different kinds have been left there from time to time, and finding abundance of food in the turtle eggs, young turtle, and sea-fowl, have multiplied prodigiously, so that there are now some thousands of them. I can testify from personal observation that they drink salt water, and they have entirely lost the faculty of barking. Some of them which have been in c-pivity for several months, had not yet lost their wild looks and habits; nor had they any inclination for the company of other dogs, nor did they acquire their voice. You may perhaps have been of this before; if so, my notice will confirm your knowledge; if not, I hope the fact, as being of my own ocular demonstration, will prove interesting. On the island the dogs congregate in vast packs, and exten sea bird with as much advoitness as foxes could display. They dig up the turtle eggs, and frequently marrel over thair boots. The greater part of with as much advoitness as foxes could display. They dig up the turtle eggs, and frequently quarrel over their booty. The greater part of them drop their tails like wolves, but many carry them curied over their backs. They appear to cousist of spaniel, terrier, Newfoundland and hound, in various degrees of mixtures, and are of all colors except pure white or brindled.

I over had money and a friend On both I set great store.

I lent my mency to my friend,
And took his word therefor.

And nought but words I got.
I lost my money and my friend,
For sue him I would not.

"If I had money and a friend As once I had before; I'd keep my money and my friend, And play the fool no more."

An interesting little girl, about three years of age, daughter of L. L. Ellis, of Trey, died yesterday. About a week ago she swallowed a nickel penny. A physician was immediately called, and all the known remedies were applied ut effect.

A new monastery is to be erected at Du uque, and the Herald of that city says: "The buque, and the Herald of that sity says: "The building is to be of stone, now being quartied, and when finished will be the most magnificant and imposing building in the state. Its dimensions will be equal to a blook of buildings in the city, with side walls forty feet high, and on the church a tower 200 feet high. In the centre of the building will be a court square of 100 feet. The designs, if carried out, will give Dubuque a monastery something like the grand old structures of Italy."

ires of Italy." RICE.-In some parts of Missouri the people are beginning to cultivate rice in the woods without clearing off the trees, and, in fact, without deadening them. The dead leaves are turned under with a builtongue plough, wherever it is practicable to do so, and the rice planted. Fair crops are raised in this way.

new wixard in England, who not only shuts him-self up in a box, but gets out without opening the door, and he does not claim that it is done by spiritual semistances, by spiritual semistances, by spiritual semistances, by positival confidences, and wrote from England to the Scoretary of War a letter as follows: "Mr. Searc'ary of War, Washington, U. S.—Will you please have your clerk read me a list of the names of all the men who have been killed or wounded in the war in your country, so that I can see if my soc, John Smith, is ng them ?" (A contribution box which was circulated in a church in this city, on a recent Sunday, was the recipient of a bunch of first-class cigare. The donor, on being spoken to for so singular a contribution, replied that as the pas-tor was particularly fond of smoking, he pre-sumed the cigars would be acceptable. They were not returned. There is a place near Boston usually re-There is a prace near inserting agarded as in rather a decaying condition. A gentleman spending the summer there recently said to a visitor: "I don't know what people mean by calling H—— a slow town. I hire this honse of a man who has gone West on a wedding our. He is eighty seven voars old, and his bride

Baron Platt, when once visiting a penal neutation, inspected the treadmill with the rest, and being practically disposed, the learned judge philanthropically trusted himself on the treadmill, desiring the warden to set it in motion. The machine was accordingly adjusted, and his lordship began to lift his feet. In a few minuter, he had quite enough of it, and called to be released; but this was not so easy. "Please, my lord," said the man, "you can't get off. It's ret for twenty minutes; that's the shortest time we can make it go." So the judge was in durance until his "term" expired.

Gail Hamilon says "a buttle of brandy makes an excellent travelling companion, if your principles and habits are good." Gail is right, it is difficult for people who have been used to West without something of the kind. Phough you might as well get whiskey at once, as get it under the name of brandy at three times the tar Connon Table Salt .- It is certainly a us chemical fact that the substances renired to form this article are both of them poieither of these articles separately with safety, a substance necessary to health, and one found upon every table — Boston Journal of Chem

D was a bold, wicked man on dry land. Crossing the ocean once, the ship was caught in the midst of a learful storm. Drought in the midet of a learful storm. D—was terribly frightened and was seen to go do n upon his knees, and with uplifted hand, heard to utter the following: "Oh, Lord! forty-one rears have I lived and never asked a favor! On, Lord! just set my feet on dry land, and I will never ask another!"

The Detroit Advertiser gives four reaget & for the present hostile attitude of the Indian. was terribly frightened and was seen to go do a upon his knees, and with uplifted hand, heard to utter the following: "Oh, Lord! forty-one years have I lived and never naked a favor! Oh, Lord! just set my feet on dry land, and I will never ask another !"

for the present hostile attitude of the Indians.

First, the Chivington measure; second, the burning of the Cheyenne viltage by General Hanocek; third, the cetablishment of military poets, contrary to treaty obligations, in the best of their hunting grounds; and, fourth, General Sherman's threat of extermination.

TALLOW—Small sales are reported at 11 to 13 to 15 to 15

Deaths by Lightning.

But few people are aware of the number of deaths occasioned by lightning, and a few words in relation to it may not prove amiss at this

It is eaid that if lightning falls on a crowd, it does more mischief among the men than among the women, the taller persons being most ex-posed. Again, animals are frequently stricken. posed. Again, animate are frequently stricken, while the persons in charge of them are spared. The old idea that the beach tree is a protection, is a fatal error—the neighborhood of all isolated trees being dangerous, like that of all highly projecting objects, except when they are in metallic connection with the soil. Railroads and tallic connection with the soil. Railroads and telegraph wires are protectors, in so far as they are able to absorb and convey considerable amounts of electricity. Every locomotive does this unperceived—lie metallic mass being an excellent conductor. Walking along the railroad track where it runs through a country without trees is as dangerous as taking shelter under a tall tree. That windows are dangerous is believed to be an error, for experience does not show that lightning strikes through open windows or follows a draft of air.

The mind of the bigot is like the pupil of the eye: the mere light you pour upon it the

R. R. R.-HADWAY'S READY RELIEF .- To be used on all occasions of pain or sudden sickness. Immediate reifed and consequent cure for the allments and diseases prescribed, is what the Haller guarantees, to perform. Its motto is plain and sys-tematic: It will surely cure! There is no other remedy, no other LINIMERY, no kind of PAIN-RIL-LER, that will check pain so auddenly and so satis-factory as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. It has been thoroughly tested in the workshop and in the field, in the counting room and at the force, among civilians and soldiers, in the perfor and in the heapttal, throughout all the varied climes of the earth, and one general verdict has come home: "The memoral Radway's Ready Relief is applied externally, or taken inwardly according to directions, pain, from wholever cause, course to extent". Use no other kind for Sprains, or Bunns, or Scales, or Curs. Champs, Bausses, or Strains. It is excellent for CRICALAUSS, MOSQUITO BITES, also STINGS OF POL prove Insucre It is unparalished for Sun Stuores. REUX, INFIARMATION OF THE BYDMACH, BOWRLS, KIDNEYS, &c. Good for almost everything. No family should be without it. Follow directions and speedy cure will be effected. Sold by bruggists teed to cure the very worst cases of broachial dis-cess. This is no idic sixtensest Nullerers, take head ore it is too lite—your broachial affection may soon be a settled consumption. Factory, % Malden Lane, N. V.

MARRIAGES.

IT Marriage notices must always be accompanied by a responsible name.

On the 4th instant, by the Rev. Wm. B. Wood, for William D. Anguagon to Miss Many A. Shav.

On the 4th instant, by the Rev. Wm. B. Wood, Mr. Withiam D. Armanon to Miss Many A. Shay, both of this city.
On the 2d instant, by the Rev. A. G. McAniey, D. D., Mr. Journ McErrina to Miss Nancy McLauss, both of this city.
On the 10th instant, by the Rev. A. Atwood, Bantin, Circan, Jr., Eq., to Miss Macalins Thuswances, both of this city.
On the Jist of July, by the Rev. W. C. Robinson, Mr. Withiam Dies to Miss Miss E. Lanz, daughter of John S. Lane, both of this city.
On the 7th instant, by the Rev. M. D. Kurtz, Mr. Javes D. Winstron to Miss Miss Arma M. Oak, both of this city.
On the 4th instant, by the Rev. George A. Durborow, Mr. Elevano Shovers to Miss Arma Spotow, Mr. Elevano Shovers to Miss Arma Spotow, Mr. Elevano Shovers to Miss Arma Spotoms both of this city.

BEATHS.

Notices of Deaths must always be accompa-ned by a responsible name.

On the 11th instant, Mrs. CHARLOTTE CAPRWELL, In her 22d coar
On the 15th instant, Sectioned Zinoten, aged 46 years.
On the 15th instant, Acceptant McCane, in his

the test into the instant, Mr. Marruias Cantwell, a his 56th year On the 17th Instant, Swearsa, widow of the late iea W. Eld'us, in ner 72d year.
On the 18th Instant, Mrs. Kuzaburu H. Wan-NER, in her rith year.
Un the illu instant, Craules R. Roberts, in his fitters.

On the 10th instant, Henny Ambenson, in his 10th

FILOUR.—The market has been very dult; sales 2500 bits at $7.25 to a for superdow. From 0.50 for old steek and fresh ground extra Stice II So for old steek and fresh ground trens and Oblo family, $10 at 1,50 for low grade and fancy Northwest family, and $150 for low grade and fancy Northwest family, and $150 for the oblo for face; branch, according to quality. By a Flour is saling in a small way at $7.15 at $2.50 for law.

and $130.18 to $7 to 1 for fancy brands, according to quality. By a Flour is sailing in a small way at $7,250.8,250 to 1.

$7,

PROVISIONS are held armly Post is held at it is to 25 for mess and 82 for prime Ulty PROVISIONS are held firmly Fork is held at $48 to prime. Uty packed mere Beet selfs at $27,9 on on, pain and fatory convenued Harma at 2 to 21c, on on, pain and fatory convenued Harma at 2 to 21c, and pickied do stiff to be shoulders in any are effected at 12c. Lard — have of to any this at 10c, 21c, and as great this size flator fators. Or dischaid at $2000, and as at 10c, 10c. Instance, or dischaid at $2000, and as at 10c, 10c. Instance, or dischaid at $2000, and as at 10c, 10c. Instance, and it was at 10c, 10c. and as at 10c. and at 10c. and 10c. an Hills Vox AX -Small sales at $10430 for yellow. Cox L. Sales at $404.75 $\infty$ ton for white as h. $4,500 $1.5 for red sat; $1.100 $1,15 for Locast Mountain Augusta, and prepared. FRUIT-Dreed Apples are selling at 60% for cease, and higher for weatern. Dried Frances.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Unequalled Inducements.

Beautiful Premium Engraving.

The proprietors of the "oldest and hest of the week lies" ofer unequalled indusements to those who issue the labor of unking up clube, as well as to those who remit, as single subscribers, the full subscription

A large and beautiful steel line engraving, 36 inches long by m inches wide, presenting all the softness and popular charm of Moszotini, called

"One of Life's Happy Hours," will be sent grave to every single ($2.5e) subscriber, and to every person, sending on a club. The great on peace of this Fremium will, we trust, be compensated by a large increase of our subscription list.

The contents of Two Pour shall consist, as heretohere, of the very best original and selected matter that

STORIES, SKETCHES, ESSAYS, ANECDOTES, AGRICULTURAL ARTICLES, RECEIPTS, NEWS, LETTERS, from the best native and foreign sources, &c., &c. &c.

NEUTRAL IN POLITICS.

Tas Poer is exclusively devoted to Literature, as re does not discuss political or sectarian ques tions. It is a common ground, where all can meet is harmony, without regard lotter views upon the politi-cal or sectarian questions of the day.

TERMS.

Our terms are the same as those of that well knows magazine, THE LADY'S PRIEND-IN order that to cists may be made up of the paper and magazine end jointly when so desired and are as follows:

One copy (with the large Premium Engravine) $3.46 I copy of The Post and I of The Lady's Friend d one engraving.

		C)	LUBS
2	00p.46				54 0
4	2.1				6.0
5	811	and one to	gelter u	proficiate.	× 0
			4.4		12 0
3 4	66	66		2.4	90 n
10					98.00

A copy of the large and beautiful Premium Engraving ("Che of Life's Happy Hours") will break! To sweat on a city. The sender of a city.

IF Any member of a club wishing the engraving remit one dollar extra 17 Sabscribers in British North America most re twenty tents extra, as we have to propay the I'.

The contents of The Post and of The Lade

BER NEWING MACHINE PREMIUM.

We still continue our offer of a Wheeler A Wilson' Newting Machine, such as Wheeler & Wilson of Stiff, in any side sending on a list of Stark or at $2 ft each. We will see send the first and on the rid terms of twenty subscribers and such that of the rid terms of twenty subscribers and such chines, if the difference in price is also resulted. in addition to his magazine or paper, a sept of the Primium enginering, "One of Life's Happy "The regular glub autocribers do not reserve g, naless they remit mediclar extra for it THE PARES OR MAGAZINES will be sent to different hacked away at until you won

REMITTARCES. - In remitting, name at the top of your Potential Process of the Control of y the Express Companies, unless you pay their charges. Address

HENRY PETERSON & CO.,

No. 819 Wainut Street, Philadelphia. If T Specimen orgics will be sent postpaid on the

THE HARBOR.

A roaring wind blew out of the South, That dashed the foam against the rocks he white caps danced or The gulls flow by in screaming flocks; But never a storm-cloud darkened the sky,

The waves flashed bright in the sinking sun; and the wind that reared to the sea bird's cry Was as gay as youth with its race to run.

White sails were glancing near and far, And some their journey had just began : And some came home to the harbor bar From the coral islands of the sun; Some from the spice Indian gales --Some from the lev Arctic breeze:

There tell of battles with mighty whales In the desolate waste of the Polar seas.

What strange, rare things bring you home to show, Oh! sailor lad, from the palm crowned heights? What from the swart little Esqu'manz, Under the arch of the Northern Lights ? What gems do you bring, my sailor man, From the elephant-trodden Indian abore What quaint devices from far Japan ?

What radiant shells from Singapore? And you have been to those shining shores endless spring, oh ! gallant back ; And you, where the Arctic tempest roars, From out the dread half-year of dark!

to one who sailed from this harbor bar Twas given to reach that mythic goal, se sea that is under the Northern Star The And rolls in mystery round the Pole.

Many and strange are the thoughts you bring, Oh! besutiful, mysterious ships My heart goes out on the sea birds' wing, its utterance dies on its fips. The sea of thought is a boundless rea-Its brightest gems are not thrown on the

The waves that would tell of the mystery Die and full on the shore of speech.

The following anecdote is from New Or-A passenger got into one of the street began to smoke. The driver objected, care and began to smoke. saying this was among the forbidden this gs, and hinting that if he permitted it he would be dis-charged. "If so," said the smoker, 'l':l engage mmediately

THE DREAMY SUMMER-TIME.

The leaves are stilled, the breezes hushed Or sing a drowsy number, And all throughout the slient day The golden hours slumber. The ripples idly lapse along Beneath the moon-tide's gleaming Ob, sure the drowsy Summer-time Was made alone for dreaming.

Within my open window flits A slumbsous breath of roses And in the softly shaded soom Silence itself reposes;
And liquid lustres on the wall Cool, rippling waves resemble, As to and fro, with motion slow, The leafy shadows tremble.

A sense of silence and repose-Of slow and tranquil motion, A murmur as of sleeping winds

Upon a eleeping ocean : And softly o'er my senses steals A luxury Elysian, And all delights of drowsy thought Arc mingled in my vision.

Oh chiding volces, wake me not, Nor turn my rhymes to reason— For life is mingled work and play, And each may have its reason. The Winter-time for study's toil, The Spring for pleasure's scheming. Autumn for the poet's thought,

And Summer-time for creaming

Disadvantages of Infancy.

BY JOHN QUILL.

A friend of mine, who lives in Oldcastle, Del. writes to me in an indignant manner about a thing that he considers "fudge and nonsense." He is a practical man of about forty-eight years he has also two daughters and the inflammator rheumatism in his left leg.

-, and be always In religion he is a _____, and ne asways votes the Reformed Dutch ticket. Although he is in the hardware business, he says he thinks he would make a good Indian fighter, for he wouldn't scalp well. His head is as bald as a In religion be is a wouldn't scalp well. His head is as baid as a slate roof, and a gentle savage might clutch and grab all over it for a hold, and he couldn't get the very first particle of purchase, because it's

But that is neither here nor there, although it is rather more there than here. He writes in regard to a piece of popular folly. Forgive his freedom of style, for he is secontric, and wherever he was just going to awear, but t seems as if the language bears the appearance of having been altered by me, the gentle reader must re-flect that at these points the rheumatism probably gave bim a twist and caused him to get up and howl.
"John," says he, "if there's any one thing

I'm more disgosted about than another, it is this idea that is going around, that it is a good thing to be young again. Every girl in this town who has got a piano, is banging away at it, morning and night, until you would think they would burst the lids off of the old music boxes, and at the same time bellowing out songs about the advantages of babyhood. 'I would I were a boy again, sing they, just as if they ever could be hops again, when they never were anything else but girls. 'Rock me to sleep, mother,' Give me back my childhood's days, &c. These are ld actually think is was a good thing to be an infant.

"But it sin't. I'll leave it to any sensible grown person if they would like to go back to the time when they were mewing, equalling, hiccoughing babies? How would you like to be dressed in a freek about a mile too long for you, and have a lot of old rags and one thing and another wrapped around you so you could hardly

But alu't that the way they treat babies? Don't you know that they pin your clothes on, and if a pin happens to jab into your flesh at any place, that's the very identical spot some person or other is a going to grab you by and hold on like grim death while you yell?

"And ain't you cognizent of the fact, also, that while you are laying asieep in your cradle, with the flice blistering you and lifting the blood out of the top of your bald head, and you, very writhing with a first-class stomach sche, just as like as not, your mother is stand ng over ; ou, and suggesting that the angels are whispering to you, because you happen to forget your agony for a minute and smile?

Gus. And then you must be aware of how they stick at you a bottle filled with curds and whey, and with a gum thing on a nonzle, and how you can suck for a week and then like curds won't come through, and you your music because you don't like that wher of taking your diet? "And then when they once get your insides crammed full, what do they do? Why, in all human probability, some old hag, who is a friend of the family, drope in and gets her grip on you, and then when you cry because you have the good taste not to admire her style of beauty, she commits ravages on the English language, and jolts you up and down until you have about a pound and a half of garlicky butter inside of you, and you get dyspepsis, because you haven't got gastric juice enough to digest a ot of grease. "This is what babies have to endure. It is one of the penalties of having been born. Intime be born an old man and live backward, taking the chances of dying in middle life.

I know, also, the abominable way they have of dragging up your petticoats and setting you on the floor to see if you can walk, while every minute you feel yourself growing bandy-legged and probably getting deformed for life, with deed certainty of never getting a pair of pantalooms to set right on you forever afterward.

"It's malice, my boy, malice aforethought, and there is no more use of denying that they do it on purpose, than there is to say that your father don't hate you when he toe and down in the air, and with murder rankling in his heart, tries to commit infanticide by joit cating a joint.

'Any man, my boy, who desires to go back and endure this unatterable agony sin't in his right mind, and he ought to be locked after to see that he don't go around and set fire to the over you, when your mother is around, and then I the stone which is called adamant, which is of a I THE SIGNIFICANCE OF DREAMS. spank you like the very nation to relieve their pent-up feelings when her back is turned. And they call them dry nurses, too. Dry? I should think they were, for every intelligent infant knows how they take you in and lay you on the pantry shelf, while they go through the rum and old ale, and then breathe on you until you are nearly sufficeated and feel like failing in a fit.

"And then don't they strap you in a gig, and take you out and let you cook for hours in the boiling sun, yes, literally cook, I say, and this, without any regard to the fact that they are absent minded, and just as like as not, when they get you home, let you hang for an hour or more e leg until your head begins to swell with

"Want to be a baby sgain, do you, and would like your mother to rock you to sleep? I should think so. And she used to do it, didn't she? In your second summer, for instance, when you were cutting your teeth, and had an dara in fantum on you so strong that you thought you would die. Did she rock you to sleep, then !
Not much. I reckon the old man used to get fantum on you out of bed in his night-shirt and growl savagely se he picked you up like he would any old of carrion, and kept the wrong hold on you while he waiked you up and down, and then when you wouldn't keep quiet, instead of rocking you to sleep, he went and got down a bottl of some soothing poison, and endeavored to kill you off with a teaspoonful.

You may say what you please, but it ain't in human nature to like that sort of thing. No man wants to go back to any such first principles as that. An inscrutable Providence has dained that you can't be born at the age of twenty-one. You have to be a baby, whether you want to or not, and it's all very well to put up with It and to endure it with Christian resignation, but to want to be a baby again is a drivelling nonsense, and the people who a anxious about it ought to be fed on pap or co pelled to suck a bottle for their daily bread, until they get cured of their folly."

Superstitions in Gems.

Mr. Emanuel says the Orientals have long seribed magic and talismanic powers to geme This belief is shared by almost every nation and even in this country at the present momen is not yet extinct, as many persons wear a tur the belief that it preserves them from contagion.'

In a poem by Orpheus, or, as some suppos by Caomacriton, written at least 400 years before the Christian era, the supernatural powers of gems, in which the Greeks had implicit b lief, are mentioned. One of their early writers ascribed to rock-crystal the power of producing the sacred fire used in the Eleusinian mys-teries; it was laid upon chips of wood in the sun, when first smoke and then flame was pro dword, and this fire was supposed to be most grateful to the gods." This seems to refer to the use of burning-glasses or lenses. Albertus Magnus ascribes this power to the crystal, and adds that if honey be added the product will be milk !

Mr. Emanuel thinks the notion of zodiace stones was connected with the twelve stones in the breastplate of the Jewish high pricet, "Gems were supposed to indicate the state of health of the donor or possessor. If they became dull, he was conjectured to be unwell or in danger; and their becoming chaque or color less would give rise to the most dismal foro-bodings. The turquoise was conceived to have an siliaity with its posecessor or master, and so change in color as his state of health altered. The fact that some turquoises do change their color may have given rise to this superstition the real cause of their variation seems to arise from the difference of temperature and state of the weather."

"Serapius secribes to the diamond the power of driving away lemures, incubi, and succubimous; and says that if the gem is placed with loadstone it pulifies its power. According to Borotine the ruby is a sovereig remedy against the plague and poison; it also drives away evil spirits and bad dreams. The pacinth, if worn on the finger, procures steep, and brings riches, honor, and wisdom. The amethyst dispels drunkenness, and sharp-

The balas ruby restrains passion and flery wrath, and is a preservative from lightning.
The emerald discovered false witnesses by suffering alteration when it met with such per

The sapphire procured favor with princer, and reed the wearer from enchantments.

The chrysolite cooled boiling water and as uaged wrash, and, if placed with potson, lost its

Some gems were used for medicinal purposes powdered, and were supposed sovereign in their effects. Even now immense quantities of seed pearl are used in China and the East for various purposes. one curious work laple landli is prescribed as a laxative. Another prescribes coral in pow der for newly-born children Natives of India imagine that when diamone powder is taken into the mouth it causes the toth to fall out. Also it acts as a preservative against lightning.

The carbuncle is efficacious against venon The chalcedony is efficacious against sorror

The chrysolite is a remedy against melan The agate is good against deadly poisons and is believed to give prudence and elo uence. The surquoise refreshes the eyes and heart The cornelian sharpens the intellect, makes men cheerful, and stope bleeding at the intellect, makes

Some stones are supposed to give light in the The Vedas mentions a place lighted by rubies and diamonds. I will add to the preceding jostings the follow ing resume of mediaval advice upon the sub-ject. If it has no other value, it has that of curicatty, as a record of once popular notions: It you wish to cause sorrow, fear, and terrible fancies and conflicts, take the stone which is called onyx; and if it be hung round the neck it immediately causes sorrow and fear in a man, and even in sleep it produces terrible fancies and conflicts. And this has been proved among the moderns.

If you wish that boiling water should go out of your hand as soon as it is put in it, take the stone which is called topas.

glittering color and very hard, so that it cannot be broken except by goat's blood. If it be fas-tened to your left side it pravails against ene-mies and madness, and wild and untamed and poisonous animals and furious men, and against strife and quarrel, and against poison an secutes of fantasme; and some call it the dis-

If you wish to avoid perils and to conque all earthly things and to have strength of heart, take the stone which is called agate. It enables you to avoid perils, and confers strength of heart, and makes a man powerful, complacent, agreeable, acceptable, and helps against all ad-

If you wish to have a good understanding and to be unable to become intoxicated, take the stone called amethyst. It avails against in-toxication, and confers good understanding in things that may be known.

esespe quarrels, take the stone called beryl Carry it with you, and you will put down all quar-rels, cause your enemies to fice, and make you foe gentle.

If you wish to appeare tempests and to cros rivers, take the coral. This is found to sta blood, to take foily from him that bears it, and to give him wisdom, as has been proved by some in our time. And it is of avail agains empeets and the perils of rivers.

If you wish to acquire wisdom and to avoid folly, take the chrysolite, which, when placed in gold, removes folly and imparts wisdom. If you wish to cure melanoholy or a quartan ague in any one, take the lapis lazuli. It is certain and proved that it cures melancholy and the quartan ague.

If you wish to sharpen the intellect of any ne, or to increase his wealth, and even to pre dict future evente, take an emerald. It cause him who wears it to have good understanding, confers a good memory, increases his wealth, and if held under the tongue will enable a man

If you wish travellers a safe journey, take the stone called jacinth. If borne upon the finger or the neck it renders travellers safe and agreeable to those that entertain them; it ale lf you wish for peace, take a sapphire. causes peace and concord, and renders the mind pure and devout towards God, strengthens the mind in what is good, and calms the inmost sou of man. LAPIDARIUS.

No person who passes only eight hours in becan be said to "waste his time in eleep." A cording to Gorget, a woman should sleep couple of hours longer than a man. For th latter he allows six or seven hours, for the for-mer, eight or nine. It is certain that strength or energy of brain will, when aided by custom, nodify the faculty of controlling the disposition to slumber. Frederick the Great, and Hunte the great surgeon, slept only five hours in the twenty-four, while Napoleon scemed to exert a deepotic power over sleep and waking, even amid the roar of artillery. An engineer has been known to fall asleep within a boiler, while his fellows were beating on the outside with their ponderous hammers; and the repose of a miller is not incommoded by the noise of his mill. Sound ceases to be a stimulus to such men, and what would have proved an inexpres eible annoyance to others, is to them altogethe unbeeded. It is common for carriers to sieer on horseback, and coachman on their coache During the battle of the Nile some boys were s exhausted that they fell asleep on the deck. amid the dealening thunder of that terrible en-

The faculty of remaining saleep for a great length of time is possessed by some individuals. Such was the case with Quip, the celebrated player, who could slumber for twenty four bours uccessively; with Elizabeth Orvin, who spenthree-fourths of her time in sleep; with Einabeth Perkins, who sleet a week or a fortnight at a time; with Mary Lyall, who did the same for successive weeks, and with many others more or less remarkable. In Bowyer's Life of Beattie, a curious anecdote is related to Dr. Reid, viz: That he could take as much food and immediately as much sleep as were at flicient for two days. The selebrated Gen. Elliott never slept more than four hours out of the twenty In all other respects he was striking! abstinent; his food consisting wholly of bread, water, and vegetables. In a letter communicated to Sir John Snelair, by John Gordon of Swing. Caithness, mention is made of a person named James Mackay, of Sherry, who died in Strathnaver, in the year 1797, aged ninety-one; he only slept on an average, four hours out of the twenty-four, and was a remarkably robust and The calebrated French General healthy man. Pichegrue informed Sir Richard Blane that during his whole year's campaign he had not above one hour's sleep in the twenty-four. Macial hnew a lady who had never slept above an hour at a time, and the whole period of whose slee did not exceed over three or four hours in the twenty-four; and yet she enjoyed excellent

Mrs. Bine.

Mrs. Blue is an unhappy woman. Life to he is a barren desert, containing nothing but sands of unhappiness. Out of little troubles she forms mountains of evile; and every moment of happi-ness is considered a forerunner of some great calamity. I have seen her go into hysterica out finger, fearing it would produce the lockiaw It Blue attempts a joke she thinks him intoxi-cated, and forthwith bemoans the manhood of her husband and preaches unto him a sermon o morals, interlarded with her own hardships Her friends have ceased to visit ber, leaving her to brood over her troubles alon and undisturbed. Poer Mrs. Blue! I pity her but her husband more.

Now there are a great many Mrs. Blues in this land of ours, who go through life a dissatis-fied, miserable and despised crowd. And, in their eager grasp after the thisties of life, the never observe or think of the beautiful flowers of happiness that grow beneath the thistles' shade. The sweet smile of innocent childhood and the approving words of old age are unknown and the approving "have set their lives upon a cast," and think they "must stand the hizzard of the die." The cast is the suppression of all that is good and nable in their nature, and the die is a life of misery and unmourned death.

premises.

"As for nurses, I suppose you know what of your hand as soon as it is put in it, take the stone which is called topas.

If you wish to conquer your enemies, take the stone which is called topas.

If you wish to conquer your enemies, take the stone which is called topas.

"Ancient history is full of such narratives, and there seems no reason why that which hap-pened to !lamilear abould not happen to Marshal Junot, and vice versa,"

"You allude, I suppose," said my friend, "to the dream which Hamilear had while besieging Syracuse; he heard a voice in the air calling out to him that that hight he should sup in Syracuse. Looking on this as presaging good for-tune, he made up his mind that he should that day take the city, and encouraged his soldiers accordingly; but it so happened that the besieged made a saily, and in the contest Hamilton him made a sally, and in the contest Hamilton him-self was taken prisoner, and did that night sup in Carthage, though not, as he expected, in the capacity of a conqueror. I remember this story in Valerius Maximus, but I do not recollect any-thing of the kind happening to Junot, who was, if I mistake not, a deeperate unbeliever."

"He was not, I believe, particularly devent; but his wife tells this story about him. The evening before the battle of Sonate, Junot re-tired to rest extremely fatigued. Hardly was he tired to reet extremely fatigued. Hardly was he asleep when he dreamed that he was on the field tale, surrounded by the dead and the dying. Before him was an armed horseman, with whom he was engaged in combat; but instead of a lance he carried a scythe, with which he struck Janot several blows, especially one on the left temple. At last the vizor of the horseman fell off, and Junot saw that he was fighting with a off, and Junot saw that he was righting with a skeleton. Flinging saide his armor, the figure now stood befere the marshal, the recognized image of Death. 'I have,' said he, 'not been able to take you, but I will seize on one of your best friends.' Junot awoke in a cold perspira-tion; he seared for either Marmont or Mairon, who would be with him in the coming engage-next. His fears were well founded. Junot received two wounds, the marks of which he bore to the grave-one on the breast, the other on the left temple-but Muiron was shot through the heart." - Memoirs of the Duchess of Abrante vol. i., p. 270.

"A very carious and very interesting story," said my friend, "and I am much obliged to you for relating it. It may be matched by scores, if not hundreds, of legends of what we call the old times,' for the anecdotes of significant dreams scattered through the writings of andreams scattered through the writings of antiquity are extremely numerous and interesting. Of these, that famous dream related by Clouro holds a distinguished place. Two travellers, Aroadians, slept at Megara, one at an inn, the other at a friend's house; to the latter, in the course of the night, his friend appeared in a dream extremely him. dream, extreating him to come and save him from death, for that the landlord was plotting to murder him; but he, not considering the dream as a matter of consequence, slept again, dream as a matter of consequence, slept again, without taking any steps for the rescue of his friend. Scarcely had he again fallen asleep when his friend again appeared, saying that it was now too late to save his life, but that at all events it was possible to avenge his murder. This time the dreamer was aroused, made his way to the inn, and was able to recover the body of his friend and punish the murderer. Again, it is related of Dionysius the Terant, that he put to death a person named Marsyas, who dreamed of his cutting the tyrant's throat, and foolishly told his dream; for, observed Diony-sius, no one would dream of such a subject unless he had contemplated it in his waking hours. This notion was not confined to the Bicilian sovereign. Plato remarked that it would be no ill mode of teeting our progress in virtue, to examine the character of our nightly visions. On the other hand, so many dreams are determined by the nature of our food, the state of our dicestion, and even the position in which we lie, that we should be hardly warranted to make any very decided conclusion as to our moral character by the nature of our dreams. Fuseli used to sup on raw pork—or at least it is said that this was his practice—with a view to procure those nightmare dreams from which he ed some of his most celebrated pie-

"To me," said I, "it appears that many dreams have caused their own prediction-suc a case is the celebrated dream of the mother of Archbishop Abbots. She dreamed that if she could obtain and eat a pike, she, though a poor woman herself, would become the mother of a great man. She sought everywhere for a pike, for she was already near her confinement, and at last sceing one in some water near her louse at Guildford, she seized it with her ha and ravenously devoured it—not waiting, as it would appear, to have it cooked. The ravagery of the act excited attention, and the cause becoming known, several persons of wealth and importance took on themselves the education of the child, kept him as school and college, and watched over his interests till he arrived at distinction.

"The case is curious, but I confess I should demur to calling Abbott a great man, except so far as he was Archbishop of Canterbury. It seems to me that occasionally men of very moderate calibre have occupied that see. What will you say to this story, which is told of no less celebrated a man than Decoartes? While at Stockholm in attendance on Christias, the Queen of Sweden, he received a letter from learned friend at D jon, in France, who related to him that while searching in vain for a passage from a Greek post, he had fallen asleep, and dreamed that he was at Stockholm in the royal library there, and on a certain shelf which he described he found a book in which, at a pardescribed he lound a book in which, at a par-ticular page, he found the passage he wanted. As he had never seen Stockholm, and was alto-gether unacquainted with the library, this dream seemed worthy of examination. He accordingly wrote to Descartes, giving a plan of the library as he saw it in his dream, and indicating the particular shelf and book. Descartes replied with actonishment that the plan was a perfectly correct one—that the book mentioned was exactly in the place pointed out, and that on the named was found the identical passage required.

"The instance," said I, "is certainly a ourious one, and especially on account of its many minute circumstances; but I remember my father relating a dream of his own of a similar nature. He had lost a Bible on which he set a high value, because it had belonged to his mother. After loag and diligent search, he gave up the hope of recovering it, when, in a dream, he went into a small dissenting chapel at the east end of London, and being invited into a pew in the gal-lery, found there his mother's Bible on the book-ledge before him. The next Sanday he went to the chapel in question, was invited by the per-opener into the gallery pew he had seen in his dream, and there, as he expected, found his mother's Bible."

SLEEPING IN THE CARS.

Toe oars were full of passengers, I can't recall the number, For I had just awakened from An unrefreebing slumber— When a lady, who sat facing me, Directly met my eye, But turned away immediately, And emiled—I know not why.

When youteful folks, who strangers are, When youthful folks, who strangers are,
Are seated face to face,
In the silence of a railroad car—
A grave and formal place—
Their wandering eyes will sometimes meet
By some strange faceination,
And they cannot keep their faces straight,
Though dying of vexation.

Simpletons they doubtless are, Whose mouths are always stretching, But the guileless mirth of maidens' eyes And dimpled checks are catching.

First she laughed, and then I laughed—
I couldn't say what at;

Then she looked grave, and I looked grave,
And then she laughed at that.

She endeavered to repress her mirth,
But couldn't hold it half in,
For, with face concealed behind a book,
She almost died a laughing.
She pouted when she found her lips
Datemined on a mile. Determined on a smile, But 'twas very plain the pretty rogue Was laughing all the while.

Thus happily the moments flew To me, at least, of course, Though when she saw me smiling too, It made the matter worse, And when, at last, I left the ear,
I caught her laughing eye,
And had one more good grin before

"Mice inn" I sought in saddened mood, And with feelings of regret; Those brilliant eyes, I felt assured, I never could forgot. And when arrived, vallee in hand, I paused—I can't tell why— Before a mirror on a stand, And gazed with curious eye.

My cravat was turned half round or more And shocked was I to find That my hat was hadly jammed before, Then while in baste my room I sought. I swore by all the stars, That I would not again be caught A napping in the cars!

LORD ULSWATER.

CHAPTER LIV.

IN MILL LANE.

The white threads of cloud that had spanne the violet sky, and at which James Sark had grzed from the steamer's deck as be went con fidently up the river to London, had changed their color more than once, as the day died out From white to pink, from pink to crimson edged with lise, from crimson to flaming orange, and so to dull copper and duller black, those floating vapor-tissues had varied, stage by stage, till the red cun went down. It was dark night presently, for the autumn twilight did not long struggle against the fog rolling in from the Thamnes, and the moon was but a pale and broken circlet, a mere thread of looid gold. It broken circlet, a mere thread of freed gold. It was dark night. Dark in the wide Woodwich Road, where bright guehes of gaslight overflowed the doorways of the public houses, where fantail burners flared in the windows of the little chope, and where the street-lamps, shone in regular array, each lamp, with a gauzy halo of fog around it. Darker in Aboukir Street, the glupalaces of which were less brilliant, and the intervals between the lighted shop-fronts greater. Darkest in the lanes that branched off, now between rows of saunt, black wooden pailings tween rows of gaunt, black wooden pailings, with a crown of spikes or vicious-looking crooked nails to defend the creat of the pailsades, now with a wall to left and right, and in some cases bordered only by a ragged hedge and deep and simy ditch. Darkest of all, perhaps, in Mill Lane, where a strongly built man, to all appearance a sailor, was loitering nearly opposite to the high wooden sate that cave admission to the the high wooden gate that gave admission to the garden and cottage, late the residence of the dead Dutch gardener, Vanpeerenboom; thesame cottage in which the Sarka dwelt. The lounger. in his rough seaman's garmente, had been hanging about that neighborhood all day, sometime in the streets, sometimes traversing the lanes, and occasionally seated close to the red-cur-tained window of a heer-shop that commanded a view of Mill Lane, or rather of the end of that dismal thoroughfare from which it would be en tered by any one coming from Lendon. was, and whatever he did, he kept watch, in a stealthy, catlike manner, upon Mill Lane and the few that passed into it or out

A sturdy, broad-shouldered fellow, with a pe scket of shaggy cloth, such as pilots and Nort Sea salvage-seekers wear, with a low-crowned glazed hat pulled down so as to shade the uppe part of his scarred fees, with a blue seaman shirtcollar hanging loose about his sunburn buil neck, and a whisp of black silk knotte nore locaely still by way of cravat. An ugly customer, emphatically. He walked with the sai lor's rolling gait, and wore his mariner's garments like one who was used to them; and th brawny wrists that protruded from the wid cuffs of his foul-weather cost were tattooe with as good gunpowder as ever was served out for small-arm practice on board a Queen's

And yet, in spite of tattooing, and sunburn neck and face, and see going clothes, some ex-ceptionally good judge of such matters—say a smart first-lieutenant of a crack frigate, or the boatswain of a liner-might have pro the man a sham, and no true forceastle Jack than most people suppo Even real of de'ect a counterfeit seaman. sailors cannot refuse their halfpence to the bawling balled-singing impostor, theatrically at-tired, who never in his life handled running rigging or bolystoned a deck; and the wearer the glazed bat and monkey jacket passed muste very well in Aboukir Street, where the inhabi-tants were as well accustomed to the sight of seafaring men as well may be. Yet the naval lieutenant would have been right in his opinion, for the lounging, loitering mariner was no other wooden gate, with the white paint peeling off it, under the influence of sun and rain, that led into the market-garden which still went by the name of "old Van's" He stood in the ditch, th name of "old Van'a." He stood in the diton, the mud of which was nearly dried by the hot weather, and sheltered himself as much as he could behind the gnarled stem of a hollow tree, a low, rotten, black stump, that had been a pol-lard willow onch, when green fields overspread the site of the market gardens. Behind this wreck of a tree he lurked, attentive to every sound that of a tree he lurked, attentive to every sound tha reached him.

The presence of such a grim sentinel would have attracted remark and suspicion any-where else. But in Mill Lane there were no windows whence unfriendly eyes could cour how often the ill-looking sailor-fellow has passe and repassed; and since dark there had no and repassed; and since tank there had not been a single wayfarer to disturb the prowling figure behind the shattered willow-tree. Groups were often seen and heard near the black gap-ing mouth of the lane, talking loud, singing, laughing, and sometimes brawling in the gasilt street, a third of which was taken up by blank bars stretches of dead-wall. But no one had turned into Mill Lane itself since the watchman, turned into Mill Lane itself since the watchman, in the pay of the market-gardeners, went by just at moonrise. But the watchman, whose natural enemies were the boys, and the objects of his protecting care cucumbers and wait-fruit, had sourcedy given a glance to the sauntering blue-jacket smoking his pipe in the cool of the evening beneath the old willow tree.

The police might be more troublesome; and Indeed, whenever the distant clink of an iron-shed bootheel on the Aboukir Street pavement reached the ears of the ambushed ruffian, and resched the ears of the ambushed ruffian, and the well-known blue uniform appeared at the corner of Mill Lane, as the wearer paneed to take a long look into the despess of the shadow, and his hand slid within his rough outer coat, with the gesture of a band that seeks and grasps some concealed weapon. But the constable in-variably went upon his way, and Mill Lane was left unevalored.

Now and then—once, perhaps, in the course of each five minutes that went sluggishly by—Bendigo Bill crept out of the dites, and crossing the lane, put his face close to the stout wooden bars of the tall nail-studded gate, and looked through into the great garden, amid the looked through into the great garden, amid the spreading vegetable beds of which the Dutch man's cottage stood, with one solitary light shining pale in a window of it. These excur-sions took but a few seconds each, and there sions took but a few seconds each, and there was one feature in them worthy of note, which was, that when the lurker outside present his face against the bars to gain a better view, the gate gave way to his touch; and yet that gate, with a bell-pull of rusty iron dangling beside it, was always kept looked after dusk, and it had been looked on that very evening. But Bendigo Bill was accustomed to carry about with him instruments that could in each of need have instruments that could in care of need have triumphed over better locks than that of the n all-studded wooden gate.

The garrotter waited, but it was fretfully, and with a tension, of the senses that kept him rest-less. His care and eyes were sharpened as are these of the ravege in his abuscade. He changed his postion again and again, stirring silently in his place of espial. He was armed—the frequency with which he thrust his hand beneat the folds of his outer garment, and the low class of something hard and beavy gave signs that such was the case—once, too, when a police-man passing the end of the lane had lingered longer than common, Bendigo Bill's face had become even more sternly set than before, and the faint click of a pistol-lock had followed.

But there was something written in this des-perado's brute face, over and above the bull-dog tensoity of purpose that made him so staunch a watch-dog. A keen observer might have noted something like fear, and something like diggest or repugnance, stamped upon his coarse lineaments. He was a worse man than he had been when first he came, a cowed beast of prey, ready to lick the hand of its master into his patron's service; but with all his hardi hood and all his wickedness, he did not seem at ease now as he stood expectant.

For what did he wait? For something, plainly, by the switching of his usually firm lips, that he half shrank from hearkening to. He had done his best, like a blind instrument, to bri the dreadful thing to pess, but be shrunk from it at the last, with a refuctance to know the in How long had he been at his poet, since he had picked the lock of the gate, and since he had taken his place behind the wil-low, armed, and resolute to resist capture to the death? Surely a long, long time. Time for a change of purpose, time for relenting, time for the discovery of unlooked for obstacles. A long time. He passed the back of his horny hand across his dry lips, waiting, listening. Ab I the church clock, far away, striking the hour. He remembered what the time had been as he passe the lighted gin-palace, before creeping into the lane. He had stood sentry some fifteen or lane. He had stood sentry some fifteen or twenty minutes, not more.

There it is at last! A cry, a long, harsh, horrid cry, elequent of pain, and fear, and startled anguish—a dread scund for human ears to listen to. Silence after that one awful outcry of agonized despair—dead, dull, absolute silence. Bendigo Bl., scoundrel as he was, had shuddered when he heard that shright rending. shuddered when he heard that shrick rending was more horrible than even the wild utterand of despairing terror that had died away upon his ear. His imagination, such as it was, was thoroughly awakened now, and he could picture to himself what it was that was going on in the solitary cottage, the one feeble light from which he could see when he bent his body forward as he then did, gazing into the great dark garden.

There was something in the picture that sickened him. A saving instinct in the man, knave and brute as he was, rose up in revolt at the thought of wickedness worse than he had ever nerved his callons heart and violent hand to do Again he draw his sleave across his dry white lips, and then passed it across his forehead, on which the heavy heat-drops stood. He gave a kind of groan. "I cuidn't—no, I couldn't. Too had for me are the heavy heat-drops stood." Too bad for me, even !" he said in a low voice unaware that he had uttered the words or merely thought them. Then he listened. His pawel of hearing was remarkable, and he had cultivated the gift, many a day, in the trackless Australian bush, when life and death were the etakes for which he played. He listened, now, less for a sound from the cottage in the garden, than very marrow of the lurker keeping watch upon an end of the devil's work going on within that dwelling, from the one window of which the candle still threw the same pale glimmer. The silence weighed upon the bushrauger's breast as a heavy stone might have done, had it been his fate to have lived a century or two earlier, and to be present to death in Newgate prison for refusing to plead. It must be over now.

No! Another cry, weak and broken, a stifled cream, that was so hollow and faint as to be elikened to the shrieks we reem to hear in a dream, and then wake, and know that our rensea have cheated us. The silence that aucoceded was deep and long. Bendigo Bill watched and waited. He saw the light within the cottage-window pass rapidly across the casement and disappear, presently a clean from the upper wholey pass rapidly across has casement and disappear; presently, a gleam from the upper windows, each in turn, showed that the candle had been carried upstairs, and the light was no longer steady, but flickering and waviss. At last it vanished. Every window was dark, and the silence seemed to deepen as the light was avincently across the control of the control of the silence seemed to deepen as the light was extinguished.

Quite suddenly, there was a noise—a sound of some one walking quickly and breathing hard, as he came with heavy tread along the mould of the garden paths. Then the white gate was pushed open, and the figure of a tall mandressed in dark clothing passed through into the lane. The gate, roughly awang open, fell with a slate against the post. Bendigo Bul stooped to pick up something that had lain at his feet in the ditch ready; it was a black clickin bag, and as sallors carry when travelling ashore, in the dich ready; it was a black offerin hag, such as sailors carry when travelling ashore, and he thrust it under his arm, and etcpped out into the middle of the horseway. The tall man who had passed through the gate spoke not a word; he made a quick imperious sign with his hand, and strode on, turning his back to the lights of the street. Bendigo Bill followed him without nearly in the street.

wishout speaking.

Up the dark lase they went without a word being said on either side, without a sign, since that one imperative gesture which the ex-convict that one imperative gestire which the ex-control had obeyed. The tail man was in senaring dress, as Bendigo Bill was, but there was nothing of the salior in his bearing. He walked very fast, wish hasty and irregular steps, care less of the stones and the runs of the ill-kept road. There was a crape mask covering his face, but this he tore off, with a fierce enacts of his left hand, and trust it into a pocket of the loose pilot coat he wore. A white handkerchief was wrapped around his right hand, which hung at his side.

So much as this, Bendigo Bill, following as dog follows his master, could make out by the faint starlight. But when they emerged from the lane into a suburban road, dotted here and there by dark shrubberies endircling white village a gas lamp, burning near the corner of the lane threw its glare upon the foremost of the two men, who surned away his face from his com men, who turned away he lace reduction on panion, as if by some instinct of concealment. "Your hand!" exclaimed the ex-bushranger, alarmed, for the white handkerchief was growalarmed, for the white handwerchier was grow-ing crimson, and down from it fell large drops of blood, that slaked the thirsty dust of the road. 'How same it like that?' he added, coming clear.—"Curre you'l she made her teeth meet in it; don't trouble me with questions," was the savage abover. And the confederates pushed on, still in silence.

Soon the tall man fell back, with a gesture that Bendigo Bill understood to indicate that he knowing the way best should take the lead. He obeyed without speaking, and they climbed hill skirting a high wall, over which waved th tall trees, as it seemed, of a park or pleasaunce and presently were traversing an open waste of like a white ribbon amid stanted heath, and orisp turf and gorse in bloom. They were climbing another hill ere long, with plantations on either another hill ere long, with plantations on either side, and suddenly they turned into a dark firwood, made their way into a thick and lonely clump of trees, and halted there.

Bendigo Bill unstrapped the bag which he earried, and laid it at the other's feet, and would have spoken, but an angry stamp of his companion's heel upon the ground, and a muttered oath, warned him to be mute. He sat down with his back to a tree drew out his pipe. filled th his back to a tree drew out his nine filled it, kindled it, and set smoking his tobacco as stoically as if he had been still in the bush, or fireside in a shepherd's but. The dark at the figure, leaning against a tree opposite to remained as motionless for a long time as if it had been a mere effigy of a man.

It seemed to Bendigo Bill as if that nigh would never end. The unnatural silence, the etrange conduct of his terrible companion, whose moods changed fitfully, sometimes impelling him to pace restlessly and similessly, like a hungry tiger, among the dusky fir-trees, over whose apreading roots his reckless feet stumbled un-heeded, sometimes causing him to care him. at length upon the bare earth, where he would lie, without motion, like a corpee: these were wild, well'd adjuncts of the vigil beneath the

Day at last. The leze clouds opened their eastern phalanx slowly, and reddish, uncertain tinte began to color the gray vapor, like a blush upon a guilty face, and objects that had been indistinct before, took shape, and became clearly defined. But Bendigo Bill still sat with his back against the tree, waiting the good pleasure of his patron. The light of early morning, cold and ead as the dawn is apt to be in our latitudes presently showed him the tall figure and bag gard beauty of the mester whom he served Lord Ulawater was walking slowly towards him from among the thick growing fir-trees, dressed in a suit of his own clothes, taken from the bas which his follower had carried. He had wrapped a large piece of torn linen around his bleeding hand. He was fearfully pale, but his face was

"Take these rage and burn them. Fire alone can hide such secrets," said Lord Ulswater, in his customary tone of command; and as he spoke, he threw down at Bendigo Bill's feet, in heap, the seaman's attire that he had worn Are you a coward," he added, sneeringly that you tremble?" For Bendigo Bill, waile hastily thrusting the cast off diagnise into his been unable to repress a shudder and an exclamation at finding that large stains of clotted blood clung, dark and wet, to the garments he was handling. "I will keep my word," said his patron, sternly. "You shall have life and liberty, and cash to start you than Bendigo Bill. He was waiting now, waiting, not patiently or with indiff-rence, but in a period that should denote that the length or with indiff-rence, but in a period that men were approaching to happen, something that was delayed longer than he had expected would be the case. He had taken up his station nearly, but not quite, in front of the old wooden gate, with the white paint peeling off it.

address. And he sure to burn that bundle you carry, ay, before you eat or drink this day."

Bradigo Bill nodded rather sulleniy.

"Ay, av, my lord," he said; and he stood long at the edge of the wood, watching the stately form of his patron as it lessened in the distance, and then, taking up his load, he tramped slowly away in an opposite direction to that taken by Lord Ulawater.

CHAPTER LY. COMING HOMB.

Late as it was in the autumn night when James Sark, accompanied by the Professor, resched the region of suburban market-gardens, in the sutskirts of which lay his temporary home, he was surprised to see no light winkling in any of the cottage windows, a sign of wakefulness and of welcome that had never before been lacking. "And yet I should have thought the little woman would have been sitting up, waiting for us," said the Manxman, as he stood before the autrance to the garden; "she always did so before. Mayhap the was tired out, poor lass," he added, gently.

"The gate's open. Why? What's up now?" cried old Brum suspiciously. "The lock's been sported. I can feel the box of the lock quite loose, only hanging by a nail." And as he spoke, the gate yielded to his touch, opening easily. Late as it was in the autumn night when

With a sudden exclamation of alarm, Sark eprang forward. The Professor caught him by "it may be the traps, yeu know—the police.
Don't run into a springs, with your eyes open man. Your wife's in no danger, remember—"
But here Sark broke from the hold of his com-

man. Your wife's in no danger, remember—"
But here Sark broke from the hold of his companiou, and ran towards the dark, slient cottage.
Old Brum followed, grumbling: "Goes into the net headforemost," he muttered; for he really expected at every instant to see the apparition of shiny hate and blee uniforms from behind the Dutch gardener's house, and to witness the arrest of Bark as an escaped prisoner.

However, nothing of the kind occurred. The old man found his yeong comrade standing in front of the door in evident perplexity. "It's locked," said the Menxman, trying to laugh.
"All right, and very oardul, you see, but she's as quiet as a mouse. Can she be saleep? Loys, lass! Loys!" He raised his voice to a higher pitch with each fresh summons, tapping smartly with his fingers on the closed door. But he called in vain; there was no answer. "Gone called in vain; there was no answer. "Gone out," pronounced Sark, in a voice that he could not render calm and cheerful, as he wished it to he: "I was an ass not to think of that before. Gone to London, perhaps, to hunt after me, or to the railway station to meet us, and missed us to the railway station to meet us, and missed us somehow; eh, Professor?"

"You wait! you wait! we'll have a light directly, we wili," said Brum hurriedly. He groped, as he spoke, behind some empty casks that stood, like a row of Morgiana's oil jars, under the lee of the outbuildings, and produced a common stable-lantern and a smaller one, such as constables arms. Then he oneed them. such as constables carry. Then he opened them, kindisd a match, and lighted both innterns. The bleck mould of the garden-path, mottled with green roses, and the nearest beds of vegetables, growing in regular ranks, like soldiers on parade, and the wall of the wooden house and the quaint porch, were revealed.
"Catch a wessel asleep!" chuckled the Pro

"Catch a wess-i askep?" chuckled the Pro-feesor; "catch old Brum napping. I thought these might turn out useful one day. Now, Jeza, we can see the footprints in the soft mould, and— Why, what alls you?" For the old and— Why, what alls you?" For the old man, chattering thus, had oaught a glimpee of his friend's face, and he wondered to see Sark, pale and ghastly with dreas, staring with starting eyebails at something on the ground—on the ground, and on the damp, sunken flagstone beore the door-something dark, and wet, and torthous, that crept, snake-like, out from beneath the shrunken wood work of the door itself, and crawled across the threshold and the etone, and formed a tiny blackening pool amid the moss beyond. "Look!" cried James Sark—"look!"—and he added, as his foot struck against something hard and metallic, and he stooped to pick up the key of the door, dropped, no doubt, by the person who had last lefe the house—"stay one noment; best let me go in west."

But Sark, who had recovered from the first terrible surprise, took the key from the old man's hand, and opened the door. He had tried to nerve himself, to harden himself against the sight that he guessed but too truly would await him within. But the reality of the horror within surpassed even his fearful forebodings of the worst. There, in the passage, at the foot of the stairs, lay Loys, dead—murdered. She lay upon the brick floor, with her head resting against the wall opposite to the door of the little par-lor; and her white upturned face, with the eyes wide open, a frown upon the brow, and the lip spart, so as to show the teeth between them was rigid as that of a marble statue, expressive of such fear, and hate, and agony as never sculptor moulded. All her beautiful black half was loose and streaming over her shoulders, tangled and torn as it had been in the hideous truggle, the signs of which were everywhere.

She was not a woman to die unresisting, and she had fought long for her life, as might plainly be seen. She had dragged herself on her knees, so it seemed, thus far, and there died : for both the murderer, and her arms were cut and bruised, and the fingers of one hand had been nearly severed, evidently in an effort to grasp the weapon with which the death-blow had been dealt. That weapon must have been sharp and two-edged, a degger or heavy sheath knife, to have infloted those deep wounds in neck and bosom that had been dealt, again and again, enough to let out more lives, it might have been thought, than that one poor life that the woman

The first blow must have been struck within the parlor to the right of the door, for there the chairs had been overturned, the table pushed aside, and a work-box lay on the floor, the bright-colored skeins of silk, and the other feminine gear that had filled it, souttered about, and soaked in the blood that was everywhere.

For it was everywhere, that damning proof of ornel orime, as juthlesely done as treacherously planned. There were spiashes and spots of the guilty crimson high upon the walls, on the furniture, on the frayed carpet, everywhere—most of all in the passage without, where Loys lay. There, too, on the white door jamb, was the distinct imprint of a gory hand. As the two men stood, mute with terror and pity, they shuddred afresh to feel that the floor on which their feet rested was allippery to the tread. Sark fall on his knees, and took the helpless head gently up, laying it on his breast. "Brum, old man, get help; for God's sake, a doctor. There may be life in her; go!" And he began to speak, half distrectedly, to the dead, calling her by cvery fond and loving name that he had ever used to her, and begging her to speak and liva, for the sake of the great love with which he had loved her. ernel crime, as juthicesty done as treacher

The Professor went harrying off, obeying, in the excitement of the moment, without remonstrance; and yet he knew that hope was past, and that all had been over long slace; but it was a relief to do something, anything. So Brown hastened off along Aboukir street, quiet enough now, and did as his friend had bidden nim. enough now, and did as his friend had bidden nim. He came back, not running, but walking very fast. "I have called up a doctor," he said hurriedly; "he'll be here very soon. But, poor chap, you know it's no good; I see you do." James Bark, with his dead wife's head pillowed on his breast, looked up at him with bloodshot, tearless eyes; then he lifted her right hand, the one that had been wounded, and eyed it niteously.

piteously.

"Look, Brum," he said—"look how the butcher has left my darling! You remember her pretty hand, so little and white—a lady's hand, you know, I used to call it. Loys was proud of it. O look, look here!" And he pressed the cold fingers to his lips, kissing them passionately, and then broke out into such an arony of sobs and tears as very few have an agony of sobs and tears as very few have ever witnessed, and fewer still, thank Heaven, have endured. Then old Brum, moved and frightened, rascal as he was, broke down, and began to cry, whiningly, like a worn-out hound that sees his master in discress.

but the Professor's mood soon changed, as a thought struck him. "My poor old Jem, old chep, you must come away," he said carnestly; "she's dead, poor thing. You know that Doctors, all the doctors in London couldn't help her; and I was a fool to raise en alarm, and bring a lot of people here, for unless you make tracks, you'll be taken." There was no reply. "Don't you hear me?" oried the Professor, shaking Sark by the arm.

The Manxwan looked up. "Let them take me. I've nothing to live for new. If they we the heart to take a man away from the slow of the only thing he ever loved, lying dead like this, why, let them hadcoff me, and drag me off. Save yourself, and let me be." These words were spoken with dogged, hopeless resolve.

"Jem, Jemi hear reasont it'll be too late."

"Jem, Jem' hear reason! it'll be too late soon," urged the Professor; but his words fell on heediese care. The old coiner was agrely puzzled. His natural shrewdness told him that ordinary arguments, common place appeals to the instinct of self-preservation, would be thrown away upon that desperate man, blind and deaf away upon that desperate man, blind and deaft to all things but the frenzy of his sorrow; and yet to abandon him to his fate, with the certainty of detention, recognition, and punishment before him, was not to be thought of. "After all," soliloquized Brum, "they've nothing much agin me. No warrants out. I've no call to run from the Philistines just now." Thus reassured as to his own safety, the Professor, lantern in hand, took a survey of the sparament, and then, shaking his head, went up-stairs. It was evident by the drops of blood that were frequent on the carpetless stairs, that the assassin had ascended to the upper floor. Above, all the doors were carpetless stairs, that the assassin had ascended to the upper floor. Above, all the doors were open, and everything was in disorder, the cupboards having been rifled, the lids of trucks and chests violently wrenched from the hold of lock or hinges, whichever had been the first to yield to the nurderer's hasty attack.

That the assassin had been in great haste was plain, not only because the clothes and other objects which the now appatied by one and closets.

objects which the now emptied boxes and closets had contained lay in a tumbled heap, tossed into the middle of the floor, and is many cases smeared with half-dried blood, but because, in prizing open one stout caken sea chest, the tool "Look!" orded James Sark "look!" and he dutched the other by the arm, and leaned heavily upon him, in the shock of that first directory, as if his limbs had lost their vigor—look at that, old man!" which had manifestly been torn away by main old Brum ploked down, shuddering. "Blood! which was about four inches long, and was ap-Darently part of the blade of a large sharp pointed knife, double-edged, and with a thick blade, such as German hunters and American backwoodemen carry.

Either the murderer desired to mislead suscion by felgning to have perpetrated his crime from motives of vulgar greed, or he had been harriedly searching for something worth the taking; and that this was not money or money's was proved by the fact, that several gold and eliver coins, with sundry trinkets, the perty of poor Loys, lay strewed about the floor disregarded. "No regular oracksman would have left 'em, that's certain," grambled Brum. It was clear to his judgment that the search after some desired object had been a real one, although exceuted with the fiercest haste, and very roughly. On a cheet of drawers stood a basin half full of water, with a towel laft lying across it, as when the assessin had washed the red stains from his hands, and turned to go.

"If he's the man I take him to be," said old Brum, with another shake of his sagacio "he's been looking for papers letters, or what not; and he hasn't found 'em, for see here!" And the Professor pounced upon a thick little packet of letters, with something in the middle of it harder and weightier than letters, tied up with a piece of faded scariet ribbon. This he elipped into his pocket. All this time he had been listening, with his head on one side, in the old raven-like fashion, for the sound of coming flootstepe. His inspection of the rooms, minute as it was, had been very rapidly conducted, for Brum had always before his eyes the ideal picture of his ally, James Sark, with chained wrists, dragged away by the inevitable police. All my cureed folly !" grouned the Professor ; gone blabbing to that doctor and his ga creeching maid-servants, about a murder in Mill

It's known up at the station by this." And at the recollection of his own improdent words, Brum groaned again, and went down-There was Jimes Sark, immovable, in the same position as before, holding up that passive head, that lay so heavi you his patient shoulder, and uttering low broken words of fondness, such tering object on the moore, half mount by mynu doer mat, and the Professor duried at it as a cut at a mouse. Yes; he was right. Here was proof positive, confirming what he had along enapseted; better than that, here was a talleman to rouse James Bark from his fatal

Dear boy Jem !" said Brum, more urgen than before; "get up, and be a man! She's dead, poor soul; but the butcherly villain—he that did this crosity—he's alive. Get up, man, uldn't lose your revenge along with

He had touched the right cord now. The He had touched the right cord now. The Markman looked up eagerly, and his face, pallid almost as that of the dead within his arms, flushed wrathfully. As quickly did a look of weary discouragement succeed to this glow of anger. "How am I to find him? I don't know who did this. Let me be, Brum!" he answered, in a dull peevish tone, like that of some sick man disturbed in his first sleep.

"Now, Jem!" cried the old man, trembling with immatisance as his watchful are distinct.

with impatience, as his watchful ear distinguished a distant sound, distant yet, but approaching; "once more, say I, be a man! Lock—look at this I've found on the floor, almost on the very spot where she lies so quiet, pow creature. Look, I say!" Thus adjured, James Sark did look at the shining object which Brum held out for his in-spection. It was a large flat gold button, part, evidently, of a sleeve link, broken, ao doubt, is ugale, and which must have dropped the struggle, and which must have cropped from the murderer's wrist, and lain unnoticed by him. A handsome and costly toy of its class, for it was studded with small turquoises dis-pessed in the form of a cross, and a coronet was engraved upon it. "That's enough proof, ain't it"— Brum was beginning, when the Manaman sprung to his feet, gently laying down upon the ground the poor passive head that he had supported on his strong arm. "I see," he oried. "I'm ready. I was struck stupid for a minute; but I have something to live for—to

There was comething startling in the sudden change that had metamorphosed this man, usually so genial and easy-tempered. There he stood, pale and stern, with blazing eyes and nestrils that dilated like those of a stag at bay, the very incirnation of vengeance. "Theicome! I hear footsteps and people talking," an ewered the Professor, grasping his companion's

The Manxman stooped, and kissed his wife cold lips again and again. "Good-bye, Loys, good bye, my dear," he murmured, and thee, wi h a great sob, turned towards the door. The noise of people speaking loudly, and of tram-lad," said Brum, in serious alarm "you'll be too late." And he almost dragged the young man through the passage and out into the garden, where several persons were already dimly wessernible, stumbling as they groped their way, and talking excitedly. The Professor's keen glance caught the dreaded sor's keen glance caught glare of buil's eye lanterns coming up the lane By main force, he drew his associate behind the angle of the cottage, and urged him on.

The house is between us and them, but th police are at the gate. They can't see us. We must get over the wall, I tell you. I'm old, but if you help me, I can manage to do is," gasped the Professor, Eurrying along the path that led in an epposite direction to that from which the ntruders were advancing. " Be quick and silent,

As they reached the wall, they heard a loud about. The crowd had entered the bouse by this time, and the outery was caused, no doubt, by the discovery of the body. Sark, with one hand on the top of the low wall, hesitated: "My poor Loya! my poor Loya!" he ground out pitcousty. "It seems cowardly to leave her to etrargers. I can't bear it." But Brum epoke quick and forcible words, pointing out the fact, that Sark's incorrectation would render him powerless against the murderer, that he might convict was always considered capable of any atrecious act, and that his best hope of exaction retribution for his wife's cruel death, was to be sassin down. "Ar, bunt him down! So I will, Be sure of that, old man," said Sark, grimly, Brom had beard many a threat of vengcance before, coupled with griels oaths and frightful curses, but never such a cool, deliberate menace, spoker in the calm plain words of a man whose mind was bent upon one purpose, and who scorned the imprecations of vulgar rage as empty babblings unworthy of a thought. He felt sure that Sark would keep his word. Then, thanks to the Manaman's strength and activity was quickly scaled, and across gardens and fields the two associates made their way un pursued, till they reached the broad highway that ied them to London.

THE DEPOSITION OF BENJAMIN HULLER.

Benjamin Huller, seventy one years of age, a native of the parish of Sheliton, and a pauper in the Union workhouse there, do declare and solumnly aftirm on oath that this my deposition and confession is a true and full statement of facts known to me. I have stated there facts freely, without fee or reward, or mailes or favor to any one concerned, as I hope for mercy to my and, as I believe, at the last extremity, I am our tain that my mind is clear, and that the circumtaken down in writing in my presence, and they are set down. And this confession I have made in hopes that, by means of it I may make rome reparation for the wicked wrong in doing that I do now most heartily repent. And I have begged the gentlemen that this deposition might be taken down as nearly as possible in my own words, which request has been kindly permitted. I was a man who had received a good education, but only nearly through my control of the color words.

tion, but going wrong, through my own fault, as at all inquisitive as to my reason for preferring I now humbly schnowledge, in spite of kind to borrow a screw-driver, and finish the job friends and enployers. I led a checkered life of much sin and sorrow, and after many ups and downs in the world, became a pruper in the workhouse of my native place. There, net with attacking my bad character and bad habits, my character and sorrow and information—structure. I was the possession of the surgeous assistant. But the part is the properties of the surgeous assistant. standing my bad character and bad habits, my superior actrees and information—superior. I two things puzzled ms. First, for what was the mean, to those of my fellow-paupers—caused budy required? Secondly, how came the dottor walls of the workhouse, and I have been wards—live? Because it so happened that I had heard man, labor-master, and other things, each time one of the women up stairs say that he was get-

At this present moment, I am deputy-porter of the Union, but at the time of which I speak I was only the keeper or guardian of the deadhouse, a duty which I go: by currying favor with the master, as I generally contrived to do when not in liquor, and by holding which I got an allowance of beer and other indulgences. Mobiling keeper of the dead-house was wall know to the work house doctor, Dr. Dennis, a gentle man egainst whom I have nothing at all to say, except that he neglected the office of at ending the Union patients more than was, perhaps, quite right in him, turning them over to his as-sistant, Mr. March.

This Mr. Stephen March, the same who taken dead out of the river Thames quite lately, habits and a bad disposition. He was in needy circumstances, very envious, and desirous to rise in life, but not industriously inclined; so he was always on the look out for some chance of growing suddenly rich. He noticed me, as a man different from the ordinary paupers, since I had travelied, and read books, and seen better days, and we had many a chat together.

One day, this Mr. Stephen Marsh came to me asking, in a joking sort of manner, if I would trouble myself to pick up a ten pound note if I found it lying in my way, and if I thought i would be a pleasant change to discharge mysel from Shellton workhouse, and go and amusmyself in London with money in my pockets. he dropped that some business was afoot by which a lot of cash was to be made, easily and without rick, I found that he was in earner His sounded me as to my inclinations, and soon satisfied himself that I was ready, and too ready, to take a safe part in any plot whatever, if a plot were brewing, provided it were made worth my while.
Two days afterwards, Mr. Marsh came again and this time he spoke more to the purpose. seemed there was a party in the backgroun that wanted, for a particular reason, to be pu secretly in possession of a child's dead body More than that, it must be that of a boy, of no more than four or five years of age, and mus be a fair-haired child. It was not for dissection or anything of that sort, or Mr. Marsh would have had no call to be so careful and mysteriou about it, because Dr. Dennis had but to speak to the master, and pay a trifle, perhaps ten shill lings, compensation, for consent of parents of relations, and there would have been no difficulty at all. But this was all to be kept as still as the grave itself.

Have I said that I was to get ten pounds for my assistance in the matter? I was differed ten pounds, and got a bit frightened at the high price. Nothing for nothing, had been the sort of rule I was used to, and I began to be afraid of rule I was used to, and I began to be afraid when I found the tariff such a handsome one. Braides, how was I to earn it? I was keeper of the dead house, where the bodies of those that died in the infirmary or the essual ward, or where not, were placed before burial; but ours was only a little bit of a Union, and deaths did not occur so frequently as in either workhouses. I wishly wasta love, thus he for there came under I might wait a long time before there came under my care such a dead child as was demanded.

On mentioning this to Mr. Marsh, he looked at me in a queez, sidelong cort of way, and asked me, had I not been in the infirmary lately So I replied that I had, that very day. Then, he said, most probably I had observed a little boy, that was ill there of the fever, a child of boy, that was in there or the lever, a child of exactly the age, size, and complexion that he had been inquiring after. This little creature was without father or mother, or any near rela-tions. His parents, whom some said were North of Ireland people, and others took them for Welsh folks, had gone about the country, hav-making and hop-picking, and working at odd jobs between the early mowing and the last of the harvest, and they had taken the fever in the strip of marshy sheep pasture down between Gridley Harbor and the sea, and note died of it, the man in some shed or barn, and the wife in the workhouse. When the poor woman was brought in, she was too far gone to state name or parish, and she merely lifted her finger once, and pointed to the west, when asked by the master where she came from. So, as the boy merely knew that his Christian name was Paul, they gave him in the workhouse books the sur set down in black and white as Paul West.

But after a little while, he was ill of the feve too, having most likely brought the seeds of i with him from the wet meadows, where there hair, almost gold color. So the young doctor reminded me of little Paul Weet. "But he'll get well, doctor," sai! I, assoniehed; "he is just the child to live to be as old as any of ue." Mr. March gave a pasty sort of listle laugh. "I' sure," said he, " that the boy will not recover.' I stared at him, and he looked rather ashamed but he went away, and came back that ver evening to invite me to take a glass at a publ hard by. It was the first time he ever offered me anything of the sort, and I thought it odd that he should sit down with an old pauper scamp, like myself, but I never could resis dripk. I went.

Over the gin and water, in a private parlor the Fishers public, the whole thing was settled. He—Mr. Marsh—persisted that the boy West would die of the fever. My share in the business was marked out beforehand. You know gentieuen, how loosely and carelessly they me nage in workhouses about everything to do with the sick pauper, from the first drink of physic he gets, right or wrong, late or early, as the ne gets, right or wrong, late or early, as the nurse is drowey or not, down to ween they lay him out in a shed before the coffin comes. In the case of little West, I was to contrive, as I easily could, to get an empty coffin buried; not exactly empty, but weighted with earth to near the proper weight, and filled up with straw rage, to prevent the earth from rattling. I could do this by occaving on the hid myself, the contractor often bringing the shell after working-hours, and his men being willing to accept a pint or so of beer from me or any one, and not from her. "He's maxed like, poor lad! no use my appeaking sense to him now," mattered his sequence of my addiction to drink and other old associate: "the game's up?" At that moment, the Professor's quick ere detected a glit.

At this present moment, I am deputy-porter of the floor, half hidden by the terring object on the floor, half hidden by the letting of the Union, but at the time of which I speak my more ulication after the professor's quick ere detected a glit.

There, in its naked horror, is the tale as told move ulication about the besting about the besting about the besting about the bash, and floding I would not by Benjamin Huller, lying on his dying bed in any only the heartest of the heartest way. several things. He has let drop plenty of other hans since, and altogether, first and last, I learned from him that a great gentleman wanted the dead child to pass off for another child of the same ege, that stood between him and large property; also that a nurse in this gentle-man's interest was ready to iff of the substitu-tion. At for my second question, the young sur-gern laughed again, in that same sneering way as before, and bade me mind my own busi-

I agreed to do what was required of me for the rum of twelve pounds, but in advance; but afterwards I demanded to be paid twenty pounds more. This—G of forgive me!—was not on account of the wrongful act I had agreed to partake in, but simply for fear of legal putchment. I did so the surgeon hade me, and asked no father, oversions, but I thought the matter. further questions; but I shought the matter over, and decided that the other child, the hei to the property, was to be put out of the way—I mean by death But I conforted myself by thinking that I had no art or part in whatever class was done, but had merely to carry out the de ception as the doctor desired. I was not very much surprised when the wardsman of the infirmary came one day to tell me that little Paul West had died that morning, and had been laid out, and to call me to help to carry the poor child's body down to the deadhouse. There was to be no inquest, because the doctor had taken his rounds carlier than usual that day, and had certified to the cause usual that day, and had certified to the cause of death. I asked which doctor, Dennis or Marsh, and I was told Marsh. I fear, very much I do fear, that the poor child met with foul play, and that Slephen Marsh went to his account with the crime of cutting short that innocent life upon his einful soul. I remember, once, when he was flurried and heated with I quor (to which he took greatly after leaving I). Dennis and setting up to practice as an ing Dr. Debnis and cotting up to practice as an independent doctor)—I remember he said that Burke and Hare were clever dogs; but that when a "subject" was wanted there were better ways of getting it than by clapping a pitch plaster over the mouth; and much more talk of that sort, which I never liked to listen to.

I am getting weak with so much speaking and I must make my story as short as I can, so it can be understood. That very evening, then about sundown, the child's body was smuggled out of the shed that we called the dead-house and out through a side door that led from the Lane, leading to the tanneries and bleaching-works at the back of the town. The key of this side-door, which was seldom used, I obtained by purloining it from the master's office, where i hung on a nail. Mr. Mareb was there, ready with a carriage—it was a phaston, a one horse carriage, hired from the Bell Hotel: and be drove it himself, and was alone. We put our load, which was but a light one, wrapped in a closk belonging to the doctor, beneath the aprop of the trap, and Mr. March drove off with itfirst paying me the sum stipulated for. And that is all I know of my own knowledge; only that on that very night my lord's little son, a child of the age of Paul West, died up at St. Pagans Abbey, as was given out-Dr. Denniand his assistant, Mr. Marsh, attending him is his illness.

I managed the mock-burial eleverly, so as to avoid easylvion; and the coffin, should it be exsmined, will be found to contain no remains of amined, will be found to contain no remains of little West, or any one clar, but exactly what I have said—earth, and tage, and straw. I dis-charged myself from the Union, going up to London with my ill got money, in hopes to got a small partnership share in a grog-shop at Rotherhithe, the owner of which was known to me, and to whom I proposed to act as barman and book keeper, since he could not read or write, though a moneyed man. But I found the place bespoke by a party with more funds; and mine soon went in drink and gambling at carde. at which I was cheated by sharpers, being hocussed, and losing ten pounds at one sitting. The end of it was, that I came back to the work-

The rid of it was, that I came once the house again, and was a pauper once more.

At different times, I got small extra sums of money out of Mr. Marsh, who had set up in a grand house at Sheliton to be a doctor on his own account, no doubt with the cash paid him or his services in that affair. But all Shellto cried out against him for his ingratitude to D Dennis, his old employer; and as his temper and habits were none of the best, and he was addicted to drink, he was soon a by-word in the town, and his affairs went from bad to worse Being idle and poor, he was always grumbling against the person who had hired him to tempt me in that had business of the false burial and out that it was the Honorable John Carnac that was the contriver of the wicked plot, and that, by underhand means, he made away with his young nephew, son of the late Lord Uiswater, at S. Pagans, who died soon after, it was sai of a broken heart, poor gentleman, being so that, to the best of my belief, the I declare that, to the best of my belief, the only son and held was really that of Paul West, the orphan; and that my lord's son was taken away out of the abbey by night, and most likely made away with by the nurse or the doctor Marsh, by desire of his uncle, Mr. Carnac, who is now Lord Ulawater. I am sure Mr. Carnac aid Marsh a good deal of money, though not so much as he wanted; and Marsh and I, and my son William Huller, made plans to obtain more money from my lord, and threatened to telt all plees he complied with our demands. My sor William afterwards betrayed us, and went over value at the wards between and then Mr. Marsh was murdered when about this very business; and I, suspecting my lord to have had a hand in the doctor's dreadful ending, came up to London to find out something about it, by help of old chums, and was run over in the streets, and taken to hospital, where, being mortally injured, and feeling my time will now be very short, I wish to make some ajonement for my ill-spe tice to be done.

One thing more. The nurse I never sawmeening the nurse who attended on the late ford's young son-but her name I understand to have been Fletcher, and she was a young wo man, married, as I believe, to an emigrant or seafaring man, whom she afterwards joined in foreign parts. She has lately been seen in Lonforeign parts. She has lately been even in Lon-don; and it was to meet her, and gain her over to our side against Lord Unwater, that Marsh made his last miscrable journey to London. This is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but by Benjamin Huller, lying on his dying bed in the Accident Ward of the hospital, whither he had been carried. To whom it was related, and by what agency it was brought about that this formal deposition was regularly taken down from the wretched old man's lips, word for word, in the presence of a magistrate, will be explained in the following chapter.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Remance of Real Life.

some time past Mr. D. D. Home, the cele brated "Spiritualist," has been staving at Mal-vern, under the care of Dr. Gully. One day last week Mr. Home suddenly disappeared from the neighborhood, and the next we heard of the gen'leman, whose face had become quite familiar at Malvern, and was not known in Worcester, is of his being a prisoner. A with had been issued against him for obtaining a large sum of money by undue influence, and the legal men concerned had thought it advisable to have some declaration made whereby Mr. Home could at once be arrested. Thus much we learn from ordinary arrested. Thus much we learn from o'dinary sources. We complete the narrative from a letter of explanation which Mr. Home has forwarded to us himself. Beginning at the period fiths "stroke of luck" which the papers obronicled last year, Mr. Home says on the let of October, 1866, he received a letter signed "Jane Lyon," in which the writer requested to know on what terms she could become a mem ber of a society of ladies and gentlemen who had clubbed together for the serious investigation of clubbed together for the serious investigation of the so called Spiritual phenomena. Without waiting for a reply she visited Mr. Home the next day and requeeted him to call upon her. He called scoordingly, and Mrs. Lyon presented him with £30 towards the expenses of the so-ciety. Up to this time she had not witnessed any of the so-called phenomena, but stated that from early childhood she had seen most won-derful visions. On the Sunday following Mr. she had seen him in victors and wished to adopt him as her son. During this interview, Mr Home says, she saw some phenomena which con-vinced her, and she expressed herself more than ever desirous to adopt him as her con. On the 10th of October, she wrote to him, and presented him with an entirely free gift of £24 000, which nim was paid to Mr. Home the next day. After this he went to Brighton, and received letters as from a mother to her son. He then adopted her name in addition to his own, and became, as most people know. Mr. Home Lyon. The winter passed, and Mr. Home was taken seriously ill. Advised to go to Malvern, he placed him-self under Dr. Gully, and during his stay at the seat of the water cure his "mother" wrote to him kind and affectionate letters: yet meanwhile (so it turns out) she was consulting lawyers as to the best means of undoing what she had done At this point she consults a supposed spiritual medium, a girl of twelve years of age, by whom she is told that Mr. Home-Lyon has a familiar spirit which has compelled her to adopt him The advice of the metium is that Mrs. Lyon shall throw the whole thing into Chancery. Mr Home returns to London as this juncture, and is received kindly by his patron. On a second in-terview, however, she demands the return of all or part of the money she has given him, and tells him that all his friends are swindlers. "This of course (says Mr. Home) renders it impossible for me to comply with her request, as much for my friends' sake as for my own." Within the shortest possible time she has him thrown into Whitecross-street prison. He only remained there one night, however, but the shock to his nervous system has been great, and he is now very ill. The case will, ere long, come before the law courts, and will no doubt be a very remarkable trial; it will be a fight between epirit uslists, and must elicit some extraordinary dis-closures; for Mrs. Lyon adheres to her belief in FUNNY AQUATIC RACES -A despatch of July 27th, from Troy, New York, says: - "A tub race for a small stake took place on the Eudeon yesterday evening, at a point midway between this city and the adjaining village of Laneing-Spotter, Pratt and C. Sillman were entered to row across in three wash tubs, using their hands for oars, the distance being onethird of a mile. Sillman won the etake in twenty minutes, neither of the others making the shor but being upset in the river several times, to th intense amusement of the immense crowd in at tendance. The tub race was followed by a blindfold boat race between C. Sillman and J Hogle for a purse of twenty-five dollars. The contestants being blindfolded, rowed in a fifs from the east shore of the Hudson to a small island therein, to reach the north point of which a distance of about five hundred feet, was the objective. Sillman won the purse in fifteen minutes. Hogle landed at the State dam, about below the starting point, on the same spiritualism, and does not charge Mr. Home with fraud, but vows that he has "a familiar spirit."

- L'errois's Worsester Journa.

A MYSTERY EXPLAINED -- Rev. Mr. in the season, that one of his members, a married lady, was not at a meeting for several Sabbaths, he called to ask the reason. As her reply was somewhat evasive, he surmised that she "had nothing to wear," and said, "you are wasting for your Soring bonnet I supposes." waiting for your Spring bonnet, I suppose."
Works passed, and still she did not make her appearance. He therefore thought he would call again. Approaching the house, he saw her sitting at the open window, and blandly resitting at the open window, and blandly re-marked, "I haven't seen you at church yet; hasn't that bonnet come?" "Yea, sir," she archly replied. "Shall I show it to you?" "If you please," answered the wondering pastor. Holding up a wee bit of a baby, she said, blush-ing, "This is the spring bonnet I was waiting for; did I do right?"

A. Hemmenway is probably the richest man in New England, with an estate of about five millione. He is now under restraint on account of his mental condition.

Some grambler, or stickler for the pro-priettes and congruities, long ago pointed out the folly of calling ladies' skirts in modern times, or almost any times, petticoats-little longer the significance of culling the chignon as now worn, on the top of the head fall! Does water ever run up bill? pompon or a water-epout, if you will; but never a waterfall, until it does fall again. The Decay of the Cherokees,

From the Moravian we gasher the following interesting items about the Cherokee Indians:—
The tribe numbers 14,000. The females outnumber the males more than 1,800. Ten years ago, the tribe numbered 25,000; but the ravages of war, the exposure of the refugees in northern ago, the tribe numbered 25,000; but the ravages of war, the exposure of the refugees in northern climates, when they were driven out from their homes during the rebellion, and other causes, have operated to produce this wonderful diminution of numbers! The Cherokees now own in fee simple about 4,000,000 acres of land, and the United States Government hold in trust for them $1,000,000. The Cherokees are the most enlightened tribe of Indians in the West. They have made most commendable progress in cirlication. Many of them are finely educated, and see men of culture and refinement. Before the war they had a number of good schools and academies, and the children of the more intelligent and wealthy were educated in eastern colleges. They have a legislative form of government, with a Senate and House of Assembly; a Governor and head chief elected by the people; courts and justice officers.

courts and justice officers.

Their country is divided into different countries. They held slaves, but in our Western provincialism that is "played out." Their former slaves are now treated with consideration and respect, and will soon become the principal men of the tribe, as they are industrious, and seem of the tribe, as they are industrious, and seem to have a greater desire to accumulate property than the native Indians. In proportion to their numbers, the Cherokees previous to the war were the wealthiest people on the face of the globe. They owned immense horde of cattle, horses and hogs. Large shipments of cattle, were annually made by them to New Orleans and other markets. One man owned 20,000 head of cattle, another 15,000. There were many that owned 10,000, 3,000, 2,000. 1,000 many that owned 10,000, 3,000, 2,000, 1,000 and 500 head of cattle each.

INNOCENT PLEASURES.—In a sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. Beliows, of New York, is the following paragraph:—

iowing paragraph:—
"For my own part, I say it in all solemnity,
I have lived to become sincerely suspicious of the plety of those who do not love pleasure in form. I cannot trust the man that never laughs, that is always sedate; that has no ap-parent outlet for those natural springs of sportivenoise and gayety that are perennial in the human soul. I know that Nature takes her revenge on such violence. I expect to find secret vices, malignant sine, or horrid crimes spring up in this hot bed of confined air and imprisoned epace; and, therefore, it gives me a sincere moral gratification anywhere, and in any com-munity, to see innocent pleasures and popular amusements resisting the religious bigotry that frowns so unwisely upon them. Anything is better than dark, dead, unhappy social life—a orey to ennul and morbid excitement.

"Women's Rights" advocates have always been fond of adducing the examples of certain queens in proof of the aptitude of women to dis-charge all the duties of life. Queen Victoria, however, in her life of the Prince Consort, most bitterly deplores the fact that she had no hus-band during the first years of her reign. In regard to her solitary responsibility, she mays:—
"A worse school for a young girl, or one more detrimental to all natural feelings and affections, cannot well be imagined than the position of a queen at eighteen without experience, and with-out a husband to guide and support her." The Queen, later in life, was, according to her statement in this work, even more positive that she had need of the advice and guidance of her husand in all the affairs of Sta

The Bank of England, whenever a counerick of one of its notes is presented at the counter, it is stated, instantly pays over the gold to redeem it. If it comes from some known person, he is only asked where he got it. If person, he is only asked where he got it. If from a stranger, the cashier signals to his detective, always in waiting, and the officer follows secretly. Before many hours the bank is in possession of the stranger's biography. The offender ones arrested, is likely to be tried, convicied and sentenced in a very summary way.

The political circles in Cincinnati are agitated over the question who is to be the next county treasurer. The office is held for two years and page $20,000 per annum. One man county treasurer. The office is held for two years, and pays $20,000 per annum. One man offers, if elected, to retain only $10,000 per year, and pay over the balance to the Bethel of Cincinnati. A clergyman follows up by offering to take the office and pay over the entire proceeds

o the Bethel A Mr. Harris, of Kingston, Wis., crushed some potato bugs in his hands, and subsequently picked some strawberries and ate them. During the following night he was suddenly attack with violent pains, throwing him late convul-sions, when for a time life was despaired of. The physicians decided that it was the effect of the potato bug. Another, after handling bugs all day, was taken sick the same way and expired before morning.

The Prince Imperial of Austria is a boy of very hery temper, and at a recent juvenile party he thrashed the son of the Prussian Ambassador for some disparaging remarks respect-ing Austria during her recent war. The Emfor and Empress chancid to enter the room this the young Prussian was whimpering, and the scene was promptly changed. consoled young Werther, dried his tears, and sissed him, while Francis Joseph inflicted a summary castigation on his impetuous scion, selling him that it was disgraceful for him to attack bis own guest.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in speaking of the proper furniture and apparatus of a Young Men's Christian Association, said that provision hould be made for "two kinds of amusements those of a muscular and those of an intellectual kind—bowling rooms and billiard tables on the one hand, and reading rooms on the other."

Kindderadatsoh, the Berlin Punch, has oartoon representing a grand barquet at the Tuilleries, in which Louis Napoleon appears in Tuilleries, in which Louis Napoleon appears in the character of "Macbeth," surrounded by royal guests. The party have not finished their soup when a shadowy "Sanquo" in the like-pess of Maximilian rises at the lower end of the board, and the Emperor and Empress start back

A Lake George correspondent says that the collapse of orholine destroys many pleasing the shrinking of the leg-gear in the accre the sprinking of the argument is a sevel, seem to have alarmingly increased the proverblal skeleton in every bouce.

A gentleman living in Green county, Alabama, has offered his entire crop of corn for 55 cents a bushel, in the field; and it is said that any amount of cover can be engaged in the canebrake region at 50 cents a bushel.

A Romance in Reality.

A Romance in Reality.

Many of our readers will remember the singular marriage of Lady Florence Paget a few years ago, which caused so much goesip in London and in the newspapers. The lady, the youngest daughter of the impecunious Marquis of Anglesey, was betrethed to Mr. Chaplin, a business man of plain features and low birth but great wealth, and the engagement, if not particularly agreeable to the young lady, was very convenient to her father and brothers, who borrowed money frequently of her fances. All seemed going on smoothly toward the wedding day, until the young lady, leaving home on a shopping expedition for precuring a portion of her trousseau, entered a store in Regent street, leaving her carriage and footwan at the door, and left the store by another door in Proceedily, where she was met by the Marquis of Hastings, and was forthwith married to him, without warning to either the jilled commoner or her own exseperated relatives. Thus far the story is an old one. But on the recent Derby day, the horse "Hermit," which so unexpected; won the race, was the property of this same discarded pichetian, Mr. Chaplin. This gantleman's winnings by the event would amount to nearly a million of dollars in our currency; and, by a singular freak of poetic justice, the largest loser is the identical Marquis of Hastings who obeated Mr. Chaplin of his love, and who is made a poor man by the Derby, the result of which so overwhelmed him that he aimest fell from his drag when the numbers were announced. Many an interesting nevel has been constructed on a less symmetrical framework of imaginary incidents than the actual events we have summarized. than the actual events we have summarized.

The Lancaster (Ohio) Eagle describes the natural bridge twelve miles south of that place, showing it to be nearly as great a ourlosity as the world-famed natural bridge of Virginia. The bridge is of solid sandstone, one hundred and fifty feet in length, and from eight

General Sickles is living in great style in Charleston. He appears every fine afternoon on the streets, in an elegant carriage, driving four splendid black horses, with silver trappings, and is generally accompanied by his daughter and a servent in livery.

23 The reports of the grape error in Ohio are very favorable, and the Cincinnati Wine Growers' Association have cheering intelligence formally investors. from all quarters. They announce officially that the prospect is "that the yield of grapes this season will be unprecedented by any year since 1859. Such is the report all over the country. In most localities the fruit hange in heavy and a first quality honoymoon.

Pianos, dress-coats and diamond-sets have long been hirable articles. Now the hiring out of bridal presents for display at fashionable weddings is a lucrative beainess, possibly bridegrooms may soon be had for hire, together with a first quality honeymoon.

The potato rot has attacked the farms on Long leland. It is reported that in some places fields, embracing many acres, are wholly blasted. The Mercer variety appears to be the most infected. To save themselves as much as possible, farmers are hastening the crop into market, though it not unfrequently happons that potatoes looking very fair when dug show distinct signs of disease in a few hours.

tangers are seated according to dress. Moire antique and honion close to the pulpit, muslims half way up the siele, lone par's bonnets back at the door, etc., etc.

the door, etc., etc.

According to the American Agricultur alist, the present eveters of yoking oxen in this country is defective. It thinks that farmers eountry is defective. It thinks that farmers never get the full power of their working owen under the present system of yoking them, and that any one who has watched a fight between bulls or oxen cught to be convinced that the forehead of the animal is the great point of power, and that yoking by the bead, as is done in South America, would be an improvement.

We always like to record acrel inventions. It is announced that at New Lebanou, in New Hampebire, the "American Patent Sponge Company" has started a factory for the purpose of "reducing aponges to pulp, to be used instead of halr in mattresses and general upholetery."

Punch says that the Sultan has made a joke! Passing the shop of a well-known coffeer, whose chignons were exposed for sale, he inand of action toward the Christian Church. Six bells, carried off by the Turks from the towns of Crete, were offered for sale in Smyrna. They were purchased by the Jewish residents of that town and precented to the Archbishop of the Greek Church, accompanied by a letter, which is one of the most touching developments of religious sensibility and kindness that we remember that the control of the contro er to have met with in these latter days.

There is a vace in the Paris Exposition valued at $2,800,000. It is made from a single

Ernest Renan, who wrote that well-known book, the "Life of Jesus," it is reported, has an income of about $20,000 in gold. Seven years ago he was everjoved at being made a teacher at a salary of $1,200 a year. His writings have made his fortune, it being estimated that his "Life of Josua" alone has yielded him $70,000

Sunday before last, at Charendon, Michigan, white several young people were returning from meeting in a carriage, a furious buil pur sued them four miles. By running the team they arrived at home and drove in the yard just in time to escape him.

in time to escape him.

ESF SNAKE POISON—Professor Halford, of Mel bourne, has published a paper in the British Medical Journal upon the rubject of the poison of the cobra-di-capello, and indicates some important points in regard to the action of the poison. He has found that the immediate rerult of the poison is to develope in the blood a number of corpuscion of living "germinal matter," which increase in great numbers, till at length they constitute the bulk of the blood.
These cells appear to be of a vegetable growth, These cells appear to be of a vegetable growth, and by their number they so completely absorb the oxygen of the blood that the person polanned

THE CABINET ORGAN,-The single house of Meson & Hamlin has succeeded in so for outerripping its rivale, that the question, "Who makes the best reed organs?" is no longer an open one. Of the excellence of these instruments we have, for our own part, become perfectly satisfied by frequent personal trials of the Muson & Hamlin instruments, and of various others. It is patent and undentable.—N. Y. Evening

ADVERSITY.—The chief misery of a sudden misfortune is not the first blow, but the aubsequent discoveries of the different wars in which is effects us, of the various prospects which are bleated, and of the nultifarious points which are blacted, and or the nuturarized points where we are crushed. An onexpected piece of good fortune brings also after it a train of delightful surprises.

27 A substitute for steel is said to have best excessfully employed in France, in the shape of bronza, containing ten per cent. of aluminum and 20 per cent. of copper. In France, the preference are new produced. the perforations in postage stamps are profused by fine needles. Three hundred of these, in the Parls macoline, act together, penetrating five sheete at a time, and descending into holes, formed with great accuracy, in a plate beneath. This plate is made of steel and wears out in a

Dr. Knux, "I see the perfection of Nature's work: the absolutely perfect, the beautful; the bighest manifestation of abstract life, clothed in

PRINCE & COS. AUTOMATIC ORGANS AND MELODEONS. forty thou sand are now in use BUFFALO, N.Y. CHICAGO. ILL.

PORT EDWARD COLLEGIATE INSTI-TUTE, N V —Fall Term of thirteen weeks begins September 5. 563 pays for a Ladv's Board, with carpeted and fully furnished room, fuel, wash-ing and common English branches. A Gentleman pays 560 without earpet. The facilities for preparing for college, for business, or for teaching either solid or ornamental studies are not inferior to those of any other seminary, however costly or pretentious. Address for catalogues or rooms, JOSEPH E KING, D. D., aug3-4t. Fort Edward, New York.

CLECTIC MEDICAL COLLEGE of PENN-ENVLVANIA.—WINTER SESSION com-mence OTOBER 7, 1867. Thirty students taken for SP per session. No other expenses. For par-ticulars address. JOSEPH SITES, M. D. Desa, 1927-121. SSB Norta Bixth St., Philadelphia

RIVERVIEW MILITARY ACADEMY, POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y .-- Location healthy 1. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Location healthy; Scenery unequalled; Building convenient; Teachers highly educated, earnest, working men; System of Order unsorpassed. A wide-awake thorough-going School for boys wishing to be trained for Business, for College, or for West Point or the Navel Acatdemy. For circutars, address OTIS BISBEE A. M., Principal and Psoprietor. jysu-st

CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS

Send for catalogue of new Architectural Works, encireling stamp. A. J. BICKNELL, Trey, N. Y. aug?-41

B. FRANK, PALMER, LL.D. PRESTA. A.LIMB.C. These inventions stand approved as the "best" by the most eminent Scientials and Surgical Societies of the world, the inventor having been honored with the award of FIFTY GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS (or "First Prises"), including the SREAT MEDALS of the WORLD'S EXHIBI-TIONS IN LONDON AND NEW YORK; also the most Honorary Report of the great SOCIETY OF SURGEONS OF PARIES, giving his Patents place above the ENGLISH and FRENCH.

quired if it was a hair-lem.

There is one divorce for every 26 marriages in Chio.

Da. PALMER gives personal attention to the business of his profession, sided by men of the best qualifications and greatest experience. He is specially commissioned by the Main Main and the last profession of the profession of the best profession. is gee in Chio.

A man in Connecticut has nearly died from the effect of a fiv bite.

The Journal des Debats, of Paris, records in instance of remarkable liberality of feeling and of action toward the Christian Church. Six is and effective day, while still greater numbers of eminents and effective day while still greater numbers of eminents and effective day while still greater numbers of eminents.

All genuine "PALMER LIMBS" have the name of the inventor affized.

Pampaists, which contain the New Rules for Amputascens and full information for persons in want of fishes, sent free to applicants by mail or otherwise. The attention of Surgeons, Physicians, and all per-sons interested, is most respectfully solicited.

The well-known LINCOLN ARM is also made solidy by tals Company. This Arm has the patronage of the U. S. GOVERNMENT. To avoid the imposition of PIRATICAL COPY-ISTS, apply only to Da. PALMER, as above directed. oct39-ly

THE BOWEN MICROSCOPE,

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 CENTS. THESE for $1.00 Address F. P. HOWEN, doc17-tf Box 1990, Boston, Mass.

INVALIB YOUNG MEN, anfiering from de-bility, after baving awang round the entire circle of quantery, send your address to a convalences, THE SON OF AN EMILIARY PRESCRIPTION OF THE PRACTICE OF A PRACTICAL MAN Address, with stamp, P. O. Box 2618, St. Louis, Manual Convention of the Convention of the GOLD: GOLD: My GOLDEN COMPOUND will force the beard to grow on the smoothest face in 21 days. Thick and heavy in every case or money refunded. Sent by mail, postage paid, for 80 cents a package ents a package Address M. A. JAGGERS, Colhous, Ills.

WHINKERS.—DR. LAMONTES CORBOLIA WIll force Whiskers on the ameothest face, or Hair on Bald Heads. Never known to fail. Emplement for 16 cents. Address REEVES & CO., 78 Nassast., New York.

Rates of Advertising.

Thirty cents a line for the first insertion. Twenty cents for each additional insertion. III Payment is required in advance

GREAT AMERICAN

Tea Company

WAVE PUST RECEIVED

TWO FULL CARGOES OF THE FINEST NEW CROP TEAS. 22,000 HALF CHESTS by ship Golden State. 12,000 HALF CHESTS by ship George Shotton.

In addition to these large cargoes of Black and Japan Teas, the Company are constantly receiving large in-voices of the finest quality of threen Teasfrom the Mo-yune districts of China, which are unrivalled for fineness and delicacy of flavor, which they are selling at the following prises:

This plate is made of steel and wears out in a single day; one made of aluminium bronzs, and under an instrument making 120,000 blows in a day, it is said will bear 180,000,000 blows without requiring repair.

The woman's form," observes the late Dr. Knox, "I see the perfection of Nature's work: the absolutely perfect, the beautiful; the bighest manifestation of abstract life, clothed in GONPOWDER, $1 25, best $1 50 . Coffees Roasted and Ground Daily.

GROUND COFFEE, 200., 200., 300., best 400 per lb Hotels, Saloons, Hoarding house keepers, and Franciscus who use large quantities of Coffee, and secondize it that article by using our French breakfast and Disner Cafes, which we sell at the low price of 200. per pound and warrant to give perfect satisfaction.

Consumers can save from 50c, to $1 per th, by purcha

GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,

Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY STREET. Post office Box, 5643 New York City.

We warrant all the goods we sell to give entire satisfaction. If they are not satisfactory they can be returned at our expense within 30 days, and have the suner refunded.

Through our system of supply Clubs throughout the country, consumers in all paries of the United States as gooding their Teas at the same prices (with the control of the Country than though the country than the same process that the same process is the same process.

Through our system of supplying Clube throughout the country, consumers in an parts of the United States can generic their Tea at the same prices (with the small additional expense of transportation) as though they bought them at our warehouses in this cuty. Some parties inquire of us now they shall proceed to get up club. The answer is amply thus: Let each get up club. The answer is simply thus: Let each poide he wants, and select this, say how much tes or codes he wants, and select this, say, how much tes or poides he wants, and select this, say, how much the same price List, as published in the paper or unour croudwark. Write the names, kinds, and amounts plainty on a list, and when the club is complete send it to us by mail, and we will put each party's goods in separate packages, and may the name upon them, with the cost, so there need be no confinence in their distribution—such party getting exactly what he orders, and me more. The cost of transportation the members of the out-can divide equilately among themselves.

of transportation the members of the cusb can divide quality among themselves.
The Funds to say for the Goods ordered can be sent by Prafts on New York, by Fost Office Money Orders, or by Express, as may said the convenience of the Club. Or, if the amount ordered exceed thirty dollars, we will, if desired send the Goods by Express, to "collect on leaders. Hereafter we will send a complimentary package to the party setting up the Club. Our profits are small, but we will be as itheral he we can afterd. We send no complimentary package for Club of lead than $3.9.

N. B.—All villages and towns where a large number reside, by quisions together, can recise the cost of their Teas and Coffices about one-third by sensing directly to "The Great American Tea Company."

BEWARE of all concerns that advertise themselves as branches of our Establishment, or copy our name either wholly or in part, as they are begins or instations. We have so branches, and do not, in any case, authorize the use of our name.

Fost office orders and drafts make payable to the order of The treat American Tea Company. Direct letters and orders to the

GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMP'Y

Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY ST. NEW YORK.

Post office Box, 5643 New York City. je22-tf Mendenhall's Improved Self-Acting

HAND LOOM

Is proving the most useful, economical and profit-able machine for family use.

THE FIRST PREMIUM was awarded to this Loom by the New York State fair, and by every State and county fair where ex-hibited for the best.

best Jeans Casinet, Tweed, Liney Lines and Cotton Buck woves on any Loom. For circular, price ifstand samples of cloth weven on the Loom, address with stamp.

A. B. GATES & CO.,
jy13-10 233 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.

YOUNG AND OLD MAKING MONEY.

The LOWE PRINTING PRESSES are the best and cheapest portable Card and Job Presses ever invented. Price of an Office with Press. 415, 820, 830. Send for a circular to the LOWE PRESS CO., 93 Water St., Boston.

DR. ORDWAY'S LAST SONG.

O'er Graves of the Loved Ones Plant Bean-

tiful Flowers." May be used as a song, or song and chorus. Embellished with an appropriate Lithegraph title. This new composition of Dr. Ordway's is universally admired and is meeting with a most extraordinary as:

OLIVER DITEON & Co., Publishers,

977 Washington St., Boston. CHARLES II DITSON & CO.

711 Broadway, New York

.

AWAT (

COMFORT AND CURE FOR THE WUFFURED. Sent, west-paid on receipt of 10 cents. Address Dr. E. B. FOOTE, 1130 Breadway, N. Y. feb9-cow171 UNCOMFORTABLE TRUSSES.

BELLEVUE FEMALE INSTITUTE,

Attleboro, Bucks Co., Pa. Attrebero, Bucks Co., I'm.

This institute will recopes for the reception of publis on the 9th of 9th month, Reptember. The different separtments are in charge of those of experience and well-known ability.

Preach by a naive French teacher. Music, Painting and Drawing by an Artist.

For Callegues containing particulars, address the Principal.

W. T. SKAL.

TO AGENTS. Experienced Book Canvasors can new processing Territory for the best book of the year. A new National Work entitled

THE HISTORY OF THE CREAT REPUBLIC. from the Discovery of America to the present time considered from a Christian Stand Point.

BY JESSE T. PECK, D. D. Address, with Testimonials, BRUUGH FON & WYMAN.
aug17-4t 13 Bible House, New York

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

AND

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

By A REFUSLICAN (not a "Radical")

This is a 19me, containing 116 pages, and is de-voted to a caim and moderate discussion of the suf-frage Question—the author contending that the Suf-frage, should be Qualified, and not Unqualified and Universal.

Universal.

Resoons are given against Universal Negro Suffrage, and also against Pensale Suffrage.

The work will be forwarded by mail (postage prepaid) on the receipt of the price, 50 cents, by the publishers. J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO., jyl3-tf. No. 745 Market 85., Philadelphia.

628. HOOP SKIRTS 628.

Of "Our Own Make" are manufactured expressly to meet the wants of First Class and most Fashion abis Trade, and embrace an assertment replete with every new and desirable style, size, and length of Ladies', Missee', and Children's Hoop Skirts, both plain and Gore Frails, which for symmetry of style, fains, lightness, clasticity, durability end chempiness are much superior to any other dingle or Double Spring Skirt in the American market. Every lady should try them, as we warrant satisfac-ion.

Wholessie and Retail at Manufactory and Salesseem, No. 628 ARCH St.
Catalogue corrected monthly of Sizes, Styles, and Catalogue corrected manual dress
Priore at Retail sent to any address
WM. T. HOPKINB.

"ECONOMY IS WEALTH."-Franklin.

WHY will people pay 8.00 or 8.00 for a hewing V. Nachlne, when 825 will buy a hetter one for all Paactical, purposes? Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the subscribers bug to inform their numerous friends that the "Franklin" and "Ms-ballin" Machines can be had in any quantity. This machine is a double thread constructed upon entirely new principles, and DOES NOT infringe upon any other in the world. It is emphatically the peop man's Sewing Machine, and is warranted to excell al., others as thousands of patrons will testify.

[Fragenical Company of the contraction of the contract of the contra

PENNSYLVANIA CENTRAL RAILROAD

SUMMER TIME, TAKING EFFECT

JUNE 2nd, 1967. The trains of the Pennsylvania Central R. R. leave the Depot, at Nist and Market Streets, which is reached directly by the cars of the Morket Street Passenger Railway. Those of the Chestant and Waikut Street Railway ran within one square of it. On Sundars—The Market Street cars leave Pront and Market Streets 35 minutes before the departure of each train.

Sicepton Car Tickets can be had on application at the Ticket Office, North-West corner of Ninth and Chestaut Streets.

ASSISTS OF THE USION TRASSERS COMPARY Will ail for and deliver baggage at the Depot. Orders off at No. 901 Chesinut Sirect, or No. 1 South Seventh Bircet, will receive attention.

MAIL TRAIN	26	100	A.M
PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 1	10	.60	18
PART LINE & ERIE EXPRESS	13	10	P. M.
PAOLI ACCOM BODATION, No. 2	1	00	14
TRAINS LEAVE DEPOT, VIZ. MAIL TRAIN PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 1 FART LINE & ERIE EXPRESS FARTIBBURG ACCOMMODATION, No. 2 HARRISBURG ACCOMMODATION		.1663	+6
LANCASTER ACCOMMODATION.		94	11
PARKENBURG TRAIN		31	1.6
WESTERN ACCOM TRAIN	- 5	40	8.8
CINCINNATI EXPRESS	7	303	61
ERIE MAIL	7	30	1.6
PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS	11	15	4.6
PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 3		6161	2.6

Eric Mall leaves daily, except Saturday.
Philadelphia Express leaves daily All other trains daily, except Sunday.
THE WESTERN ACCOMMODATION TRAIN runs daily, except Sunday — ror full particulars as to fate and accommodations apply to FRANCIS FUNK, Agent, 137 Bock Street.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT BEPOY, VI
CINCINNATI EXPRESS PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS ERIE MAIL PAOLI ACCOMMOPATION, No. 1: PARESSURS TRAIN LANCASTER THAIN PAST LINE AND ERIE EXPRESS PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 2: DAY EXPRESS PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 3: HARRISBURG ACCOM.	1.15	A.M.
PHILADELPHIA EXPRESS	7.10	41
ERIE MAIL	7.10	8.6
PAOLI ACCOMMODATION, No. 1	9.29	6.6
PARKESBURG TRAIN	9.30	6.0
LANCASTER TRAIN	12 40	P.M
PAST LINE AND ERIE EXPRESS	1.10	6.6
PAULI ACCOMMODATION, No 1	4.10	84
DAY EXPRESS	5.20	8.6
PAGEL ACCOMMODATION, No. 3.	7 00	8.6
MARRIBBURG ACCOM.	9.56	66

For further information, apply to JOHN C. ALLEN, Ticket Agent, 901 Chestnaths SAMUEL H. WALLACE, Ticket Agent, at the Depot.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. will not assume any risk for Baggage, except for Wearing Apparel, and timit their responsibility to time Hundred Dollars in value. All Haggage exceeding that amount in value, will be at the risk of the owner, unicase taken by special contract.

EDWARD H. WILLIAMS,

PCRETS: SECRETS:—A curious book of 300 secrets and many strange pictures. Enough said. You can guess the test. 305 pages. Seat by mail, postage paid, for $1, or 3 copies for $2. Seat all money for books in letters to Box $55, Calbeun, PSYCHOMANCY.—LOVE! LOVE!—Full inattentions by which may person can master the whole art of Ventrioquism and undying love of either set in a few hours, and make a wirld of fun and a fortune. Sent for 5 cents. Address F. F.

WOOD, Vernon, New Jersey. augi-4t.

THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.

The First Mortgage Bonds,

INTEREST, SIX Per CENT. in GOLD.

are offered for the present at Minety Cents on the Dollar and accrued interest at hix per Cent. in Currency from July 1st.

The Company would state that their work con-tinues to be pushed forward with grant rapidity. An additional section of 50 miles will be completed laring the present week, making and stocked with locomotives, care, and all the appartenances of a first-class road. The amount already paid in by stockhelders of the Company is $5,000,000.

425 Miles West from Omaha in operation.

The aid received from the U. S. Government in constructing this portion of $25 miles is :

1. A DONATION of 18,800 acres of adjacent lands to the mile (nearly all very valuable),

8,446 000 acres. amounting to U B. Hix per Cent currency, interest Bonds, which are a second Hen, at the rate of $16,000 to the mile, amounting, for the 495 miles, to $6 900,000 The amount of the Company's own First Mortgage Bonds on $25 miles to $6,800,000 It will be seen that, exclusive of the land grant, the First Mortgage Bonds represent only about one-third of the value of the property on which they are arcured. The Company is also restrained by its Charter from issuing its bonds except as the work progresses, and to the same amount on the various testions as are issued by the Government. The mortuage which secures the bondholders is made to Hon. E. D. Morgan U. S. Senator, from New York, and Hon. Oakes Arnes, Member of the U. S. House of Representatives, from Messachusette, as Trustees, who alone can issue the Sonds to the Company, and who are responsible for their issue in strict accordance with the terms of the law. A statement of the earnings for the last quarter will be published in detail at an early day; but the accounts are already sufficiently balanced to abow that the net amount is much greater than the gold interest on the bonds that can be issued on the length of road operated. It should be remembered that these earnings are only upon a way business in a the vast traffic that must follow the completion of the whole line to the Pacific in 1970. These facts are only intended to show that these Bonds are strictly one of the safest as well as one of the most profitable securities, and are fully entitled to the confi-dence of the public. The Company make no appeal to the public to purchase its Bends, as the daily subscriptions are large, and fully equal to their high price of Government stocks to exchange for these Bonds, which are over 15 per cent cheaper, and, at the current rate of premium on gold, pay Over Nine per Cent. Interest.

Subscriptions will be received in Philadelphia by

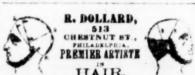

THE TRADERMEN'S NATIONAL BANK, WILLIAM PAINTER & Co. TOWNSHIP WHELLS & C. E. LEWARS & Co .

F. Srusn. in Wilmington, Del., by R. R. Roninson & Co.

JOHN McLEAR & SON New York at the Company s Office, No. 80 Nassau Street, and by the CONTINENTAL NATIONAL BANK, NO. 7 NAMES St., CLARE, Dongs & Co., BANKERS, No. 51 Wall St., John J. Cisco & Son, BANKESS, No. 33 Wall St., and by BANES AND BANKERS generally throughout the United States of whom maps and descriptive pamphiets may be obtained.

JOHN J. CISCO, Treasurer. Sth. 1867. NEW YORK 1102 17-19

HAIR.

Inventor of the celebrated GOSSAMER VENTI-LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOU-PACES Instructions to eachie Ladies and Gentle-men to measure their own heads with accuracy.

For Wigs, facket

No. 1.—The round of the head.

1.—From forehead to neck

2.—From ear to ear round the forehead.

1.—From ear to ear round the forehead.

He has always ready for sale a splendid steck of Gents' Wigs, Toupers, Ladies' Wigs, Half Wigs, Frische, Braids, Guris, &c., beautifully manufac-tured, and as cheap as any establishment is the Union. Letters from any part of the world will re-order attention.

Private rooms for Dyeing Ladies' and Gentleman's

STRANGE, BUT TRÜE.

Kvery young lady and gendeman can hear of something to their advantage and have the model love letter and secrets of success sent free by ad-Jr. Dos W, VERNON, New Jersey CECRETS! SECRETS!-A wonderful strange b.) Heek, containing 30 pages with 30 atrange secrets. It is eases the whole set of Ventrikequism, Spirit Rappings, and how to talk with the world of aprits, and how by burning certain chemissis, to cause rain thouser and lighting and all the wonderful tricks performed by all the wonderful spicks performed by all the wonderful spowmen of all countries. Seat by mail, posting paid, for $1, or $ for $2. Address M. A. JAGGERS, Calboua, III.

PHILADELPHIA CATTLE MARKETS.

The supply of Beef Cattle during the past week amounted to about 1500 head. The prices realized from $10 those who use Russetl's [TALIAN COMPOUND from 16e17 chr w b 250 cows brought from $10 to 10 which were the single remedy by which he catter the market beyond of decleate size. Menny person to get close brought from $10 to 10 who wend the prices and size of success, flow to Get Rich, &c., all making the past was carefully scaled for 50 cents, by RUSSELL & CO., 5 Beckman $1, New York

TRUSSIS.

Address

Dr. E. B. FOOTE, 1130 Breadway, In a size level for your from Nerveau Debitity. Free to those who use Russetl's [TALIAN COMPOUND decreting in directions. Will, for the sake of any person toey choose. The single married happy and Wiss $1. The single married, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single married happy and Wiss $1. The single married happy and Wiss $1. The single married, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single married happy and Wiss $1. The single married, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single married, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single married, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free for was careful free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the married happy and Wiss $1. The single free, the marri

WIT AND MUMOR.

Stragglers in the Rebel Army. The Southern journal, "The Land we Love,"

After the wounding of General Joseph E After the wounding of General Joseph E. Johnston (who was a rigid disciplinarian) straggling got to be very common in the Army of Northern Virginia. In a short time strengting degenerated into desertion, and the latter being punished flufully and irregularly the army diminished down to the squad which surrendered at Appenatox Court House. The oft-abused hostitality of the Virginians was outraged dering the war by roving bands of these worthless creatures, who always claimed that they had had nothing to eat for three days. This was the stereotyped formula. They always told, too, of the desperate fights they had been in, and of the wonderful fests of valor they had performed.

We have never heard of the folling of be one straggler, and that deserves to be commemorated, because of its rarity. Whether the good woman who baffled him did it through abrewd ness or simplicity, we leave it to the reader t

- and her two daughters were si ting at their work in a plain room of an ordinary farm house, in Madison county, Va., when a dirty, rusty-looking, but fat and florid seldier knocked at the door. On entering, but told his tale, the old tale so often heard by Vir matrons. That and the replies to it were

Straggler-I was out off in the retreat th other cay, and the Yanks most got me, but I killed three on 'em first. I've had nothing to eat since. For three days I've not had a mouthful. Hard fightin' and poor feedin' for us fellow.

Old Lady—Blees my life! Not eat a mouthful in three days! Run, Polly Ann, and make the kittle bile quick. Put on some corn-meal and fix up some warm grad for the poor stary.

'body.

Straggler—I'm to powerful weak, couldn't ou give me some bread and mik and a bit of nam?

Old Lady—The worst thing you could eat
Miss Smith's son Jimmy, he got lost out black berrying', and when they found the little crittee in the gum swamp he was nigh on to dead. Dr. Jones, he was sent for, and he up and said that the boy must have nothin exceptin it war gruel for as many days as he were out in the wood Miss Smith, she's a monstrous particular person and she fed Jimmy on gruel for two blesses days and nights, and Jimmy can run about now as peert as anybody.

Mraggler—I've hearn that a little whiskey was good to bring a feller roun' who had got down that are way.

Old Lady-Wus nor ever! I'm rael soured, stranger, that hunger's made you crazy like. You, Betsy Jane, run and help Polly Ann make that kittle bile. Git some dry chips in your apron, and I'll take the meal out myself. Ever hard to bile.

aggler-I wish you and Polly Ann and Betsey Jane may all git to a country where the glet.)

Old Lady-I do believe the ungrateful critter wants us ail at the bad place, and me a doin' all I could for him. But he's monstrous fat for a should think they would keep the pewe from dust; I shall certainly soil my new eatin. I wonder whether anybody noticed my new bon-net? I think it's very becoming. Goodness i if there isn't Miss Sprague, the school teacher, rigged out in a new mantilla. She spends all her salary on dress, or I'm mistaken. I do hate vanity and cetantation.

A Church-Going Belle's Soliloquy.

"I wonder who that young gentleman is in the next pew; he's very handsome certainly. never saw such a becoming moustache. I shouldn't wender if it was the city cousin Mra Primrose has told me of. I should like to know if he's married. I guess I will speak to Mrs. Primrose after church. Pechaps she will intro-

"Oh, dear me! what a long prayer. It's tire-some standing up so long. I hope they'll intro-duce the custom of sitting down during prayer. "I wish papa would take a pew in Mr. Watson's church. Such a beautiful preacher as he is. His sermons are so poetical, and then he's so handsome and so intellectual. They say he's looking out for a wife. I wonder what sort of a minister's wife I should make. I have serious thoughts of joining the church.

"How unbecomingly Mrs. Spaulding is dressed. I believe that woman is perfectly destitute of tasts. When will that sermon be through? declare if there len't Miss Holder with a feather in her bennet! Some people admire her com-plexion, but it's my opinion that any one may have a fine complexion who will paint! Toan! Heaven! I haven't come to that yet!

"How hot it is! Where's my fan? The benediction at last. Now! must contrive to see Mrs. Primrose, and get an introduction to that gentleman. Ah! there she is!"

Sold Ovsters as an Azent.

Deacon Simes was an austere man who followed oystering, and was of the hard-shell per suasion. The deacon "allus made it a pint" to sussion. The deacon "allus made it a pint" to tell his customers that the money which he retell his customers that the money which he re-ceived for "isters" did not belong to him. "The good Father made the "isters," said the deanon, "and the money is His'n; I'm only a stocart." They do say the deacon had a way of getting about ten cents more on a hundred by his pecu-liar method of doing husiness for semebody class. One Sanday morning the old fellow was One Sanday morning the old fellow was case. One Sanday morning the old fellow was tearing round from house to house with a suppicious bit of currency in his hand, and more than a suspicion of rage in his face. Some one had given bim a bad fity cenus, and he "wasn't goin' to meetin' till that ar was fixed up." "Why, descom," said one of his customers, whom he had tackied about it, "what's the odde? what need you care? tim't yours, you know; you are only a steward; it isn't your loss." The descon shifted his shoulder, walked to the door, usahipped his guid and said to the door, unshipped his quid, and said, "Yeas, that's so; but if you think that I'm agoin' to stand by and see the Lord cheated out agoin' to stand by and see the Lord cheated on of fife cents, you're mistaken. I don't foste no such feelin'?"

A small town is a place where there are many tongues to talk and but few heads to

A DOOSID AWKWARD QUESTION.

PROUD FATHER (with the eye-glass) —" Now, Frank, your honest opinion, please. Which depended of the property o

The Algerian Came " Vadace." The game is of the atmost simplicity, and consists solely in abstaining from receiving any-thing whatsoever from the person with whom you play. In order to ratify the convention which is established between the players at the commencement of the game, each player takes by the end a piece of arraw, a alip of paper, or even, it may be, a blade of grass, which is broken or torn in two pleaces between them, the sacra mental formula "Yadace" being pronounced at the same time. After this, the law of the game is in full force—that is to ray, the opposing parties are at full liberty to cheat, swindle, deceive, and take advantage of each other, at the certiset opportunity. If a European take part in the game, he is sure to be quickly beaten; but with two Moors, or Jewa, or Mrorish ladies, attraction of nutral activities. a struggle of mutual astnteness, caution and dreumspection begins, which is prolonged for days, weeks, months, and in many cases years. The following story will suffice to initiate any one into the mysteries and peculiarities of the game; and also show the danger to the Moor of aving at Yedace with his wife.

Hassan el-Djeninah was victor, and chief favorise to the Pasha or the Ondiah of Constan tine. He was the fatint man in the Pashalic, and, more than that, was reckuned the most jealous husband in all Barbary. And it is some hing to be considered jealous in a land where all husbands are notoriously so.

Giv young Mussulmans trembled when they saw flassan el Djoninah waddle across the great square of Constantine, or issue from the bar-ber's shop. He walked slowly, for his breath was shore; but his yataghan was long, and he could use it

Hassan had four wives - a very moderate and respectable number for a Moor. The name of the youngest was Leila Khanoum. Now, if Has san-al-Djeniuah was jealous of his wives, they, you may be sure, were jealous of each other; save poor little Leila, who was only sixteen, and not at all of a jealous d'sposition; but between the envy of her sister-wives, who hated her and the uncessing watchfulness of her husband who loved her with most inconvenient fonduces she led a terrible life of it. Leila Knanoum was Hassan's favorite wife. He would suffer her, but no one clee, to fill his pipe, to adjust the jaweled mouth-piece to his lips, and to tickle the soles of his august feet when he wished to be lulled to sleep. He would lull for hours on the cushious of his ciran, listening while she sang monotonous lov songs-rocking hereels to and fro the while, and accompanying hereels upon a guitar, in the manner of Moorish ladies gold; he gave her a white doukey from Spain to ride on; he gave her jewels, resulted tobsoco to smoke, henna for her eyelids and finger-nails; in short, he paid her every little delicate atten tion that he could think of; and finally, he condesoended to play with her for a princely stakenothing less than the repudiation of the other three wires, and the settlement of all his trea-arres upon her—at Yadace.

At the same time, as I said before, he was terribly jealous of her, watched her day and night. He kept spies about her, brined her attendants, came home at day-b.eak after a night of watching, silont and unobserved. He studied the language of flowers, which in the Kast is rather more nervous and forcible than with us finally, he took a lodging on the opposite side of the street, that he might sit and watch who went in or out of his house when he was sup

One day while employed in this dignified pur suit, he saw his wife's female negro slave emerge from his house, look round caudously and beckon with her hand. Then from a darl passage a figure, babited as a Frank, followe the slave into the house, and shut the door.

This was quite enough. Up jumped Hasan, rushed across the street, and into his wife's act of bending over a large cheet that stood upon the ground. Hasan-s! Djeninah saw the state of aff-ire in an instant. The Giaour must be in the cheet! He knocked over the wretches black slave like a nine-pin, rushed to the chest and tried to raise the lid.

"The key, woman I the key!" be cried.
"My lord, I have it not. It is lost. It is gone to be mended Hassau was no. a man to be triffed with : the trembling Leils knew it, and soon handed him the key. He rushed to the chest, and tors open the key. He rushed to the cheat, and tore open the lid. There was certainly some one inside, habited as a Gisour; but beneath the Frank habit were discovered the face and ferm of Suites. Lella Khanoum's favorite Georgian

What-what means this!" asked Haman looking very foolish

Yadace, ob, my lord; for you took the

"Yadace," repeated the Georgian slave.
"Yadace," screamed the negress, with a hor rible grin

Allah akbar!" exclaimed the vanquished Hasean. "Allah akbar! I've wives!"-A Winter in Algeria. " Allah akbart I've lost my three AGRICULTURAL.

Wastes of the Farm.

There are few pursuits in which so many leakages occur as in farming. A little want of minute attention here, and a little there, make up a very considerable sum when all added together at the end of the year. There may, possibly, be such a thing as being too particu-lar in regard to trifles, such a thing as spending oo much time in raking perfectly clean, when a greater loss will follow from want of attention eleewhere, and no doubt some discretion is to exercised as to where attention shall be directed to the greatest advantage at any given We once knew of a farmer who lost a time. We once knew of a farmer who lost a responsible and desirable position because when a committee went to examine his premies, a little lock of hay was found lying on the barn there were to use in danger of being stepped upon by the passerreby. He never knew, and probably does not to this day, why it was that the committee decided against him.

This was perhaus an extreme case and yet

This was, perhaps, an extreme case, and yet if he was in the habit of leaving hay scattered about upon the barn floor, the waste in the course of a year must have been considerable, and it would have been a fatal defect in his management. But there are farmers who ought to know and do better, who allow a waste in this particular alone, of hay, or straw, or corn fodder enough in the course of a summer, to keep a good sized cow one full winter. The complain that farming don't pay. A very little care, a very little time spent in adopting a more perfect system, would add to their income, to he extent, at least, of the profit on a cow for the year.

But the difficulty is that the farmer who suffers so great and constant a wate of feeding substances on the barn floor, carries this mode of management into the whole routine of the farm. The cattle may not get regular times, or if cleaned o hould be, the manure is left to swelter in the ma or to be drenched in the rain without the protection of a covering of boards, as under a bed, or in a barn cellar, or of a mixture of ab sorbents, in the form of muck, or loam or sand. The pigate is not regularly and systematically supplied with bedding or new material to be worked over into manure. On such a farm you viil find vacant spaces among the corn, care essly trimmed headlands, bushes growing alone ivision fences and along the roads. You will find various farm implements exposed to the weather, various trees neglected and fruit-less for want of attention, and generally an air of neglect about the premises, the fields and the

There are a thousand little things that really to not take any time at all to attend to, because they come in as a part of one's general ma nagement and occupy odd hours only. One man in passing through his fields may see a mullein or a dock, or some other vile weed of the stronger sort, and up it comes. He will not allow such growth to sap the goodness of his soil. Another will pass them by unobserved.

A whole pasture of mulieins, a whole field of A whole pasture of miliens, a whole held white weed, a whole garden full of yellow dock, would hardly excite his notice. Now the farmer who takes a few steps to pull up a yellow dock, really spends but listle time in keeping down the vile weed, and he probably effects more in his day's work, than the man who neglects it. He day's work, than the man who neglects it. He will soon have less, till his fields are clean and free from such worthless growth. It is the system that one adopts, and the want of system on the part of the other, that leakes the difference between the thuifty farmer and the careless one. It you find a man's fields reasonably clean and free from weeds, his pastures free from mulicine and such like growths, you would axpect to find his barns kept in order, and would observe but little wants of feeding substances, or other things about the premises; you would find his heart in his business, and it makes a wonderful difference at the end of the year. n who neglects it. He wonderful difference at the end of the year, whether this general system of economy is adopt

A farmer who keeps his tools scattered about, and who eafters the hay to go to waste on the barn floor, will justify it on the ground of want of time; but the fact is, a reasonable degree of order and neatness, saves time; and not only that, but it makes the difference between suc-cess and failure in any farming enterprise. It makes a vast difference in the results of the year, for instance, whether a head of cows in a year, nor measure, wherever a need or con-dairy are regularly milked, regularly fed, and regularly turned out of the barn or not. Every-body at all conversant with farm management knows that. In one case it is a steady persistent knows that. In one case it is a steady persisten system, in the other it is chance, and the chanc system, in the other it is chance, and the chance is that it won't pay.

In conducting any farm, many things have to be done that do not in themselves pay an immediate profit. It is the future results that are to be looked to for the returns in money. If the fields are kept clear of weeds, the grass will flourish and yield goods crops. If the pastures are cleared of brush and mulicins they cerry more stock, and the good crops of hay and the good pasture put on fiesh and beef and mutton, which, in the form of these products, or in the form of milk, or work or wool, must be expected to pay in dollars and cents. Here is the result of system, and the farmer who adopts the true system and follows it up will be sure to succeed, or if not, he ought to, for the result will generally measure the value of the system.—

Massachusetts Ploughman. Manachusetts Ploughman,

Insect-Plants.

A REMARKABLE TREE — Dr. Stanley L. Haynes, in a short pamphlet entitled "A Ramble in the New Z-sland Bush," tells the following remarkable tree story:—The pata tree is said to have a most remarkable mode of commencing its exa most remarkable mode of commencing its existence. The young plant takes root in the head of a caterpillar, which buries itself before it dies (or is killed by its strange parasite,) and so enables the young plant to obtain a legitimate and radical nourishment from the soil. Dr. Haynes possesses four specimens of this lurus natura; in three of them the stem grows from the top of the esterpillar's head; in the other it grew straight forward between the eyes; on one of them two stems arise from the head. The caterpillars are three inches long and half an inch in diameter, and are quite dry and brown, without indications of having been at all decomposed. On the contrary, the true and false feet and the eyes and mouth are well preserved.

eyes and mouth are well preserved.

The foregoing, clipped from the columns of the Public Ledger, although very "remarkable," the Fublic Lenger, although very "remarkable," if true, yet is not nearly so remarkable as a case recorded on the 257th page of the "Family Magazine" for 1840, published at Cincinnati, O., by J. A. James & Co.

According to the account there recorded, a strange insect-plant was procured in Plymouth, North Carolina, preserved in alcohol, and brought to Cincinnati by some individual, not named in the communication. This strange insect-plant or plant-insect, is represented as being fully one inch and a half long; of a brownish color; two filliform antenna; and with a pair of anterior palmated feet, similar to those of a groundmole. It has also two posterior feet; and after the insect is matured, it burrows into the ground, and these two feet become developed as a plant or plants, resembling trefoit, growing about six inches or more in height. The extremity o The extremity of these branches bear a bud, not of a leaf or a dower, but of an insect in embryo. As this embryo developes, the insect falls to the ground and feeds upon the leaves of the mother plant, and as soon as it is matured, it, in like manner, goes into the ground, and a new plant comes up, and so on during the season. No more was said upon the subject then, because a gentleman of Philadelphia was cultivating a quantity of them, for the purpose of furnishing museums. Ac-cording to the illustration of this rare animalplant, which accompanies the article in the book, the insect bears some resemblance to the common mole-cricket -- Gryllotalpa--differing very much in this respect from its cogener

These accounts need authentication and con firmation, and perhaps if ever "a gentleman in Philadelphia" has been experimenting on this subject, these remarks may bring him out, I hope, for I have long been looking for his report. That a hard seed might get into the body of an insect, and therein germinate and grow after the insect had buried itself in the ground and died, is not remarkable; but that the plant growing therefrom should bear a bud producing like insect, requires ocular demonstration for any one to believe, unless coming from the most unquestionable authority.—S. S. R. in Farm and Firends.

RECEIPTS.

CHICKEN BONED -Any bird is boned in the same way, the larger the better. Take a dry picked chicken. Cut off the legs at the first same way, the larger the better. Take a dry picked chicken. Cut off the legs at the first joint. Split the back skin from the neck to the rump. Break the wing joint, and the wing comes off with the rest. With a small, charp kni'e, peel off all the flesh, cutting close to the bone. You get off the flesh and skin in one piece, with the legs and wings on. Then cut out the leg homes and the wing hones. he leg bones and the wing bones.

The chicken weighed $3\frac{1}{2}$ los. There was also used $\frac{1}{2}$ los. of bam, 3 she-pe' tongues, $1\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. of sausage meat, and $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of salt pork. The ham, pork, and tongue are cut in fillips. The tongue may be eisher fresh or salted, best fresh, and must have been boiled well.

Spread the chicken flat. Lay on a layer of sameage meat. Then a layer of fillets of ham and pork. Then a layer of sausage meat. An-other of fillets, till you can get enough to fill the hicken. You can put in the legs and wings and a few fillets of truffles if you wish up the chicken so as to cover the meat, &c, and sew up, and leave a little space open so that you sew up, and have a little space power towel. Put it in a pot, with the same seasoning as for broth, and cover with cold water. Boil gently three

It will sink at first, and when cooked it will rise above the water. You may put the bones and trimmings of the same chicken in to make broth if you choose. When cooked take it off in the pot and let the pot cool with the chicken in it. Take it out, lay it on its breast, towel in it. Take it out, lay it on its broad, that and all, with a weight on it, over night. That will flatten it, and next day lay it on a plate,

Scottores Tonators -Take fine, large toma cool. LOPES TOWATOM — Take time, large toma-toes, perfectly ripa. Scald them to loosen the skins, and then peal them. Cover the bottom of a deep dish thickly with grated bread-crumbs, adding a few bits of fresh butter. Then put in a layer of tomatoes, seasoned slightly little salt and cayenne, and some powdered mace or nutmeg. Cover them with another mace or nutmer. Cover them with another layer of bread-crumbs and buster. Then another layer of seasoned tomather; and proceed thus till the dish is full, finishing at the top with bread-crumbs. Set the dish into a moderate oven, and bake it near three hours. Tomatoes require long cooking, otherwise they will have a raw taste, that to most persons is unpleasant. Young Corn Omelet.—To a dozen ears of fine

Young Corn Ones.st.—To a dosen ears of fine young Indian corn allow five eggs. Buil the corn a quarter of an hour; and them, with a large graster, grate it down from the cob. Beat the eggs very light, and them stir gradually the grated corn into the pan of eggs. Add a small salt-spoon of salt, and a very little cayenne. Put into a hot frying-pan equal quantities of lard and fresh butter, and stir them well together over the fire. When they boil, put in the mixture thick, and fry it; afterwards browning the top with a red-hot abovel, or a salamander. Transfer it, when done, to a heated dish, but do not fold it over. It will be found excellent. This is a good way of using boiled corn that has been left from dinner the preceding day.

Sweat Apple Fix —Take sweet apples, grate them fine, mix with sweet milk. Add a teacup of sweet cream and one egg to each pie; season it with numeg or orinnamon, and bake with one crust, and you will have a simple but delicious pie.

To Respons a Causeling Beach Sur Deme

ple.
To RESTORE A CRUMBLED BLACK SILE DRESS.
—Sponge the slik with spirits of wine, ditued with a little water. Then iron it on the wrong side, keeping a piece of muslin between the surface of the silk and the hot iron.

THE RIDDLES.

Enigma.

WRITTER FOR THE SATURDAY SYBRING PORT

I am composed of 25 letters.

My 1, 9, 13, 2, is a person's name, signifying "Strength or valor."

My 17, 3, 19, 6, 20, is a person's name, signifying

My 24, 23, 9, 16, is a person's name, signifying "Of high descent." My 13, 2, 22, 9, 13, is a person's name, signifying

"Strong counsel."

My 18, 12, 18, 4, is a person's name, signifying

"A friend or companion."

My 10, 14, 13, is a person's name, signifying "A candle." My 15, 17, 9, 17, is a person's name, signifying "Careful."

My 9, 15, 5, 11, 4, is a person's name, signifying "Happiness." My 22, 9, 13, 21, 2, 25, is a person's name, signifying "Studions."

fying "Studions."

My 9, 8, 9, is a person's name, signifying "Living."

My whole is a maxim. OORA.

Floral Rebus.

WRITTER FOR THE SATURDAY EVENISS POST.

flower whose language is " Hope." A flower whose language is "Compassion."

A flower whose language is "A token."

A flower whose language is "I have a message for you."

A flower whose language is "Beware."

A flower whose language is "Le plus soin, le plus cher."

A plant whose language is "Disdain."

plant whose language is " Peace."

A flawer whose language is "Feate."
A flower whose language is "I wound to heal."
My initials form the name of a flower whose language is "Depotion."

AZARIAN

AZARIAN.

Problem.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Being engaged in laying out an oblong garden, which contained just an acre and a haif, I found that having cut off from one end a square area, the greatest square I could form in the remainder contained just 64 (sixty four) square rods. What were the length and breadth of my garden?

W. H. MORROW.

Irwin Station, Pa. An answer is requested.

Problem.

WRITTER FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Being on the bank of a river and wishing to find the distance between two objects, A and B on the opposite side, I set a stake, C, where I stood and measured back from the river 48. feet, and set another stake, D, to range with the former and the object A; then at right angles with this line, I measured the distance o' 80 feet, and set another stake. E, and from this I measured 50 feet directly towards the object B, and then set another stake, F, and found the distance between C and F to be 44 feet. I then distance between U and F to be 44 feet. I then found if a straight line were drawn from the object A to the stake E, it would cross the line C F 27 feet from the stake C, and if one were drawn from the object B to the stake D, it would cross the same line 26 feet from the stake

F. Required the distance from A to B.
E. P. NORTON. Allen, Hillsdale Co., Mich.

An answer is requested. Conundrums.

What two letters in the alphabet have set in them? Ans.—M. T.
What are the two most intemperate letof the alphabet? Ans -X S. What are the two most sinful letters of abet? Aus.-N. V. Why is a tournament like sleep? Ans .-Sceause it's a knightly occupation.

Answers to Last. ENIGMA-The Atlantic Cable. REBUSedon, Teiro, Essex.

A e d o D.
T e i r o.
E a e E I.
Towns in Scotland Enignatically EXPRESSED — Applecross, Dunbar, Selkitk, Dollar, Wigtown, Portsoy, Peterhead, Bathgate, Glasbero, Montross.

Errate.

Answer to Artemas Martin's PROBLEM, Oct. 1856, as given by A. Lamy, is erro the Problem is indeterminate.

the Problem is indsterminate.

My answer to Ariemas Martin's Problem,
My answer to Ariemas Martin's Problem,
Peb. 23, 1867, is only true for an acute triangle, and does not a tisif the conditions of the Problem.
The answers given by W. H. Morrow and Joseph Paebos to Problem by W. H. M., April 27, 1867, are erroneous. The Probability is as 2 to 3.
Respectfully, J. M. GREENWOOD.